WYOMISSING (Berks Co.) - A former county agent and agriculture-teacher-turned-Berks-County-Commissioner, Judy Schwank, told the Pennsylvania Young Farmers at their annual meeting Wednesday evening, that farmers drive the whole (economic) engine.

"It's important we keep you (financially) healthy," Schwank said. "We have the land (in Berks County) and we are able to protect it. But we must protect you, the farmer."

Schwank said farmland preservation efforts in Berks County started in 1989. Since that time, 14,500 acres have been protected. The goal is to protect 200,000 acres. The County has committed $7 million to the farmland preservation effort this year.

"More than 40 percent of the land in Berks County is devoted to agriculture," Schwank said. "We have 1,200 businesses and 1,800 farmers that provide jobs

Held in the Capitol East Wing Rotunda and set around a buffet of Pennsylvania foods, the reception gave legislators and guests a chance to talk about some of the key issues in agriculture. It was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Department of

Delmarva Broiler

ATLANTA, GA.
FEBRUARY 09, 2000

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was generally limited to previous commitments with most plants noting typical mid-week inactivity. Offerings were readily available and competitively priced to stimulate buyer interest. Live supplies were mostly moderate; weights were desirable to heavier than desired. Processing schedules were moderately heavy. Less than truckiot asking prices were 1 cent lower at 46 to 58 cents. Trade sentiment was weak and unsettled. In the parts complex, all items were at least adequate for the very light and highly selective buying interest.

Liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection in the Eastern region for the week ending January 29, 2000 were 12 % less than last week, and 10 % less than a year ago. National Grain Market

St. Joseph, MO
Wed Feb 09, 2000

USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News
Daily National Grain Market Summary

Grain and soybean bids gained some ground today, supported by improved export wheat sales, short coverings ahead of Friday's USDA supply/demand report and light fund buying on the Board. Wheat 1 to 9 cents higher. Corn 1 to 3 cents higher. Sorghum 2 cents higher. Soybeans 3 to 5 cents higher. Wheat bids were moderately higher as good overnight export purchases added strength. Warm temperatures and dry conditions in the Plains areas have traders concerned that wheat may come out of dormancy early and in- crease the risk of freeze damage later. Forecasts continue to call for dry weather in the Plains this week. Slight advances in corn pits were due to light farmer selling and higher soybean bids. Export sales have been very slow this week and concerns over Chinese competition, limited gains. Dry conditions continue in the Midwest areas. Soybean bids were slightly higher, also, as South American weather con- tinues to be favorable for yield improvements. Traders await USDA's report due out Friday and short coverings are being seen. Some light fund buying was also noted on the Board, today.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

LUPERCALIA?

By some theories, our modern-day Valentine's Day celebrations may date back to a pagan Roman festival called Lupercalia. This fertility ritual was customarily commemorated on February 15. Lupercal was the site where Romulus and Remus were suckled by the wolf, according to legend, and it was at this place that the annual Lupercalia was staged, in honor of Lupercus, the pastoral fertility god and patron of flocks. The Latin lupus means "wolf," of course. So, this Valentine's Day, watch out for wolves in sheep's clothing, and consider adding some lupine seeds to your card.

To St. Valentine, spring is a neighbor.

TIP OF THE WEEK

STUFFED PORK CHOPS

8 pork chops, 1/2 inch thick
1 large onion, chopped
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 cups seasoned croutons
2 cups chopped apples
1/3 cup raisins
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon sage

Sear pork chops and set aside. Sauté onion in olive oil, then stir in remaining stuffing ingredients and seasonings. Cook until warm. Place 4 pork chops into the bottom of an ovenproof casserole. Spoon stuffing over these and top with remaining chops. Bake uncovered at 350° F for about 1 hour.

Makes 4 to 6 servings.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

Winter's back breaks, February 17.

A fair day in winter is the mother of a storm.

The crocus was dedicated to St. Valentine and ought to blossom about this time.

OPINION

Telling The Farmer's Story

Two large Pennsylvania farm organizations this week, made a creditable attempt to let consumers know how little of their pay checks really go into buying food.

First, at the Pennsylvania Young Farmer Convention in Reading agriculture spokespersons went to a local grocery store on Tuesday, talked to shoppers about food production as it relates to farmers, and took the shopping carts full of items from two shoppers and paid for the food items in the carts, but not the non-food items. You can be sure these shoppers as well as the check-out persons were amazed at how many items in the carts had nothing to do with food. This is an annual event for the state young farmers and a quite worthy effort to draw consumer media attention to the farm situation.

The second event was sponsored by the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau. They proclaimed Wednesday, February 9 as the day consumers have earned enough to buy groceries for the year. It takes the average family just six weeks to make enough money to feed itself for the entire year, according to the state organization.

To mark this "Food Checkout Day," as it is called, county farm bureaus held special events too. For example the Lancaster Farm Bureau collected food for Ronald McDonald House in Hershey. Cereals, dried foods, canned goods, and powdered goods were accepted along with monetary gifts at several local stores and delivered to Ronald McDonald House on Wednesday.

We commend these efforts to show Americans just how cheep their food is. In 1958, it took 22 percent of the average American family's income to pay for food. Now, four decades later, food costs are down to just 10.9 percent. Jane Balmer, Lancaster Farm Bureau president, said consumers pay three times what farmers are paid for eggs and twice what a farmer gets for milk. "People throughout the United States need to take a closer look at the plight of farmers," she said. "The general public does not understand our problem. The shoe factories have gone overseas. Now, they are doing it to agriculture: they're going to import the food."

Hopefully, with efforts like this from good farm organizations, the demise of production agriculture in America will not happen anytime soon.

FARM FORUM

Editor:

According to the Vice-President of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, Carl T. Shaffer of Mifflinville, "things are as bad for dairy farmers in Pennsylvania as they have been in decades." Despite our booming economy, 203 family dairy farmers in Pennsylvania were forced out of business in 1999. That's 2% of all the dairy farmers in the Commonwealth!

One of the most important things Congress can do to help Pennsylvania dairy farmers is to expand the Northeast Dairy Compact. We started this process last year and we need to continue the effort in the new session of Congress that has just begun.

Last year, I worked with many members of Congress from Pennsylvania like Con-

To Sign Up For Drought Payments

Just a reminder the sign up deadline for both the federal and state drought programs is February 25. The federal program has $1.2 billion for farmers who suffered losses to 1999 crops due to natural disasters.

Farmers are eligible for compensation for 1999 crop losses directly attributed to adverse weather and related conditions. The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania has created an emergency drought relief program for farmers who suffered crop loss due to the 1999 drought. The $60 million state program is in addition to any crop assistance available under the federal program. There is also $5.6 million available to assist farmers in meeting the requirement to purchase federal crop insurance for crop years 2000 and 2001. To sign up for these programs contact the Farm Service Agency (FSA) office serving your county.

To Look At Five Steps To Improve Yields

Robert Anderson, Lancaster County Extension Agronomy Agent, offers the following five steps to improve yields and profitability.

1. Soil tests are important. They point out nutrients that are missing and need to be added to bolster yields. They also point out where fertilizer costs may be reduced.
2. Select hybrid and varieties based on performance. Use test comparisons that are conducted close to home under conditions and management similar to your own operation.
3. Practice patience. Plant as early as you can but when soil conditions are not suitable, keep the seed in the bag. Avoid going to the field anytime during late winter or early spring when soil conditions are not favorable. Soil compaction, especially shallow compaction, robs yields
4. Calibrate the planter metering systems. Over applying or under applying of insecticide or fertilizer may affect yields and reduce profits. Even when starter fertilizer is needed, increases in yield usually occur when the minimum amount of fertilizer is applied. Over application of pesticides is costly and does not improve results. and
5. Check equipment before heading to the field. Late winter maintenance, which replaces those broken and worn out parts on equipment will decrease the amount of down time during soil preparation and planting.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WATCH!

February 13, 2000

Background Scripture:
Matthew 24:1 through 25:13.
Devotional Reading:
Matthew 24:36-44.

The Sunday after Christmas I taught our adult Sunday school class on the subject, "Apocalypse: Will There Be A Next Sunday?" Today, as I write these words, it is next Sunday, January 3, and despite all the dire predictions, we made it through New Year's Eve and Day without any worldwide cataclysms. (Yes, I realize that, by the time you read this, there may have been some!)

During our study of the apocalyptic element in Christian belief, we studied a variety of relevant biblical texts. We studied premillennialism, postmillennialism and amillennialism. We considered the beliefs of those who believed Christ's Second Coming was his resurrection, those who believe it was in the Pentecostal experience of the Holy Spirit, those who believe that it is what the Christian experiences at death, those who believe his return can be identified with the gradual, evolutionary growth of God's rule on earth and those who believe Christ is yet to come apocalyptically.

To me, it seems that the only unambiguous biblical texts on this subject are those typified by what Jesus says to his disciples–and us–in Matthew 25: "Watch therefore, for you know neither the day nor the hour" (25:13). Like the ten maidens awaiting the return of the groom in his parable, we do not know when our Master will return and I believe that he does not want us to know: "But of that day and hour no one knows, not even the angels of heaven, nor the Son, but the Father only. . . Therefore you must be ready; for the Son of man is coming at an hour you do not expect" (24:37,44).

Two Strategies

It would seem that there are two strategies for making sure that Christ does not catch us unprepared. One would be to find some way of determining just when and how he is returning. Just as we prepare for an important day in our lives by marking it on the calendar and calculating what we must accomplish before that date falls, so we could similarly be certain of being ready for Christ's return. The only thing wrong with that strategy is that Jesus says we are not to know "that day and hour."

That brings us to the second strategy: to be ready for his return at any time.

We are to be ready for him, not at a precise month, day and time, but for all months, days and time. "Therefore you must be ready; for the Son of man is coming at an hour you do not expect." That is the whole point of the parable of the wise and foolish maidens at the marriage feast and also of the story about the wicked servant who, thinking his master has been delayed in returning, begins to abuse his fellow servants (24:45-51). Please note that the advice of Jesus is not geared to helping them to prognosticate the time, place and manner, but to be 'ready.'

Coming – Ready or Not!

So, what does it mean for us to be 'ready'? There is nothing esoteric or mysterious about the answer to this question, for the technique of being 'ready' is simply to be doing what the Master expects of us. For the wicked servant, being 'ready' would have meant taking care of his responsibilities and his fellow servants just as the master instructed him and expected of him. For the five "foolish" maidens it would have meant simply being prepared for their task by having ample oil with them for their lamps.

The most important question, however, is not what they needed to be doing, but what we need to do to be 'ready' today. If Christ were to return to us tomorrow, what would God expect of each of us? Of course, his expectations would vary with each individual, so the thing you must ask yourself–as I must ask myself–is: what does God want to find me doing when Christ returns? Give some thought to that question and don't dismiss it too quickly or too simply. Rightly understood, it is one of the most important–if not the most important–questions you can ever ask yourself.

With all the reading and thinking I did in preparation for my class, I decided that, as Christ predicted, I don't know when, how and where Christ is returning. Nor does he want me to devote myself to trying to determine those details. What he wants of me is also what he wants of you: "Watch therefore, for you know neither the day nor the hour."

A dry year translated into an early harvest for Ansel Webster. All the corn was taken off the first week of October with average yield of 177.3 tons per acre (dry basis). He credits "Mother Nature and the Lord" for his achieving high corn yields in a drought year. Photo by Carolyn Moyer

Tioga Co. Correspondent

TIOGA (Tioga Co.) — "I've never reached 1,000 tons before," said Ansel Webster. He credits "Mother Nature and the Lord" for his achieving high corn yields in a year when many farmers watched their crop wither away in the drought of 1999.

His average yield was 5.49 tons per acre. On a dry matter basis, that translates to 177.3 dry shell bushels per acre.

This year on the whole 185 acres, "I had 1,015.17 tons of high moisture corn," said Webster. "I was top dog last year for the county. I don't know where I am this year."

The highest yield he usually has is around four tons per acre.

"We must have had some really heavy dews along that river and enough rain when we needed it," said Webster, who plants a 95-day corn on his sandy loam soil.

"We can get by with 100-day corn, but if you go over that, you're really pushing it as far as high moisture shell corn. Of course for silage, you don't have to worry about it as much. That can vary quite a bit."

Because of the dry weather, corn dry down was faster than usual.

"We started combining the first part of October, which is really two weeks earlier than we generally do, so this year has been an exceptional year. We were all done this year by the time we generally start," said Webster.

Webster's corn is custom combined, placed right on trucks and moved to the farm which has purchased it. All of Webster's corn is harvested for

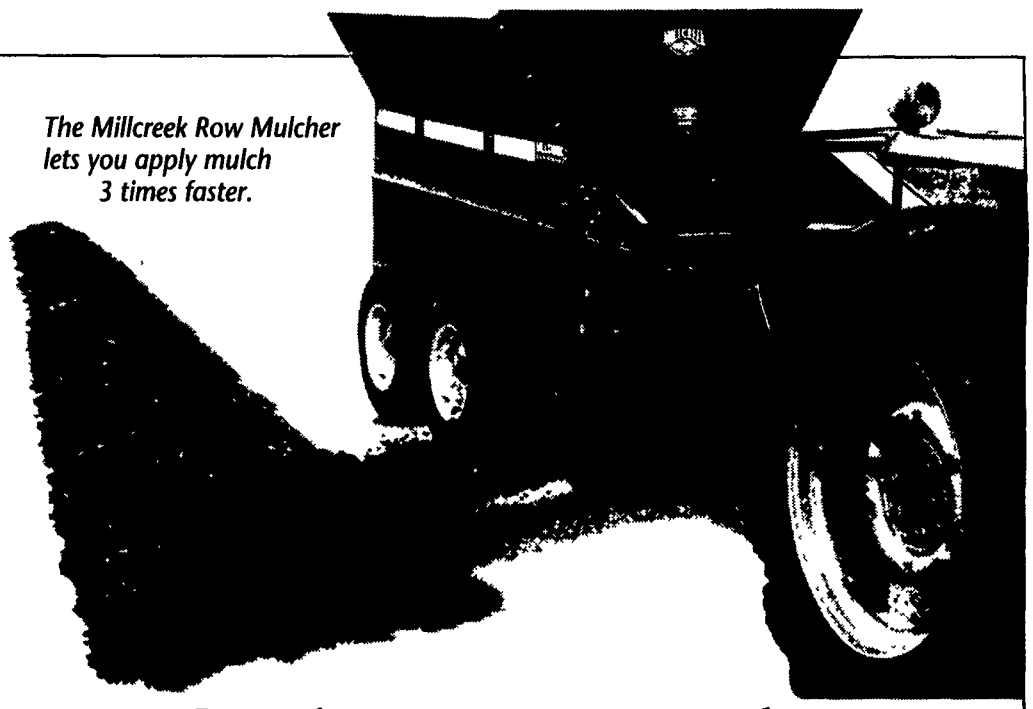
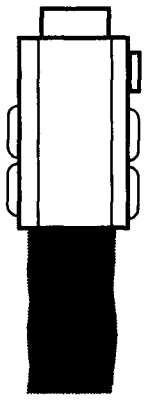
The Millcreek Row Mulcher lets you apply mulch 3 times faster.


Apply compost and organic mulch to any row crop automatically


YOUR CHOICE
Millcreek Row Mulchers also let you drop spread in the center of rows.
From tree fruit to vegetable beds, from bramble crops to vineyards, organic mulch and compost can reduce chemical input for weed suppression, retain soil moisture, and improve soil fertility by adding organic matter to sandy and clay soils.
Now Millcreek eliminates the costly labor needed for organic mulch and compost application. The remarkable new Millcreek Row Mulcher works with all types of organic material, and even lets you adjust the depth and width of the mulch rows from 12" to 120" wide, from 1/2" to 6" deep.
Starting under $6500, no other machine compares when it comes to capabilities, versatility, and cost effectiveness. Rugged construction. Six sizes, from 3.4 to 20 cubic yard capacity. Custom designs. Call today for a free color brochure, or to discuss your specific needs.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

By Ken Bailey
Penn State University

February 4, 2000 USDA Announces January Class Prices

-Class II Price $11 43/cwt=20
-Class III Price $10 05/cwt
-Class IV Price $10.73/cwt
-Barrel prices weaken

USDA announced the remaining class prices for January 2000 These prices are derived from the following NASS averages for January: butter: $0 8820 per pound nonfat dry milk: $1.0115 per pound, cheese: $1.1517 per pound; and dry whey: $0.1857 per pound. An important reference is that NASS cheese prices (an average of block and barrel prices) last January 1999 averaged $1 7225 per pound and butter averaged $1 4154.

These commodity prices were used to determine component values. These are important prices since three of the four (butterfat, protein, and other solids) will appear on milk checks for those farmers that ship milk to component pricing orders (8 of 11). For January 2000 the component values were: butterfat: $0 9366 per pound, nonfat solids: $0.8574 per pound, protein: $2.1677 per pound; and other solids: $0.0503 per pound

The Class I base price (to which the differential is added) and part of the Class II price have already been announced earlier. The January Class I base price at 3 5 percent butterfat is $10.90 per cwt That compares with the Class I mover from a year ago of $16 84 (see Table 3). The January Class II skim milk price was announced at $8.42 per cwt.

The rest of the class prices were announced by USDA on February 4, 2000. Most of these prices are on a skim and butterfat basis For comparison purposes only, USDA computed class prices on a hundredweight basis adjusted to 3 5 percent butterfat. They were: Class II: $11 43, Class III $10 05, and Class IV $10.73

So, what do these prices mean? First, the Class III price still has a lot of meaning to dairy farmers. That's because it is a major part of their milk check Farmers paid on a component basis will see butterfat, protein, and other solids prices on their milk check. Combined in a formula, these prices are similar to a farm-level Class III price. If a farmer has standard component levels, their Class III value will be similar to the announced Class III price However, if their component levels are above average, their Class III value will exceed the announced Class III price.

The other class prices (I, II, and IV) are used by the Market Administrator in each order to compute a pool value. This is similar to the old blend price It is from the pool value that a market-wide producer price differential, or PPD, is computed. It is simply the pool price less the Class III price.

Table 3 provides a forecast of Class prices for the rest of the year and compares this forecast to similar prices for 1999. Milk prices will be depressed the first six months of 2000. Thereafter, prices will likely increase.

These prices should be considered "rock bottom " Actual prices may be higher. The Chicago Mercantile Exchange announce their 2000 Class III settlement prices as of February 4 as follows: February: $9.65, March: $10.05; April: $10.27; May: $10.80; June: $11.55; July: $12.40, August $12.70; September: $12.85; October: $12.85; November: $12.36; and December: $12 04. Clearly the market is more optimistic than my forecast.

Commodity prices were relatively stable at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange this week. Block cheese prices were steady at $1.11 per pound, whereas barrel prices declined from $1.09 per pound on Monday, January 31 to $1.0825 by Friday, February 4. Nonfat dry milk was stuck at $1.03 per pound (both grades). Grade AA butter rose from $0.94 per pound on Monday, January 31 to $0.97 per pound on Wednesday, February 2, and then declined to $0.9625 on Friday, February 4.

I developed a federal order page on my website for forecasting and reporting federal order data. The Penn State Dairy Outlook website is: http://www.aers.psu.edu/dairyoutlook/. Click on "Federal Order Data and Forecasts."

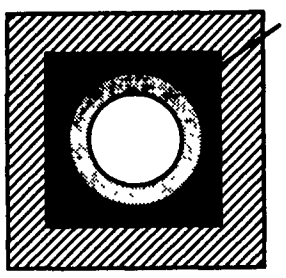
... For New Construction Why Not Examine The "Chimtek Difference."



Chimtek Inner Liners are madeof volcanic pumice and high-tempertature refractory cements, Its round shape provides even temperature inside flue and contributes to efficient flow of smoke and flue gasses. The volcanic pumice in Chimteck liners adds considerable insulating value.

All three chimneyliner systems disbritubed by DS Machine Shop are of super design, super performance, and super value. With all their advantages these chimney systems often cost no more than ordinary chimneys. Write or call us for more specific liner information.

CATTLE: Compared to last week's closing prices, slaughter steers closed 1.00- 1.50 lower. The market moved progressively lower this week and never found support, with the weakest point coming late in Thursday's offering. Receipts returned to normal this week after two weeks of winter weather slowed marketings. Nebraska feedlots sold cattle mostly steady to 1.00 lower at 69.00 and 108.00-109.00 dressed, but the High Plains had yet to trade their showlists by Friday morning. A good test of local Holstein steers sold fully 1.00 lower and slaughter heifer sales were mostly weak, with the exception of a fancy offering that sold 1.00-2.00 higher at Lancaster on Monday. Slaughter cow prices turned sharply lower this week, after last week's highs, and closed 2.00-2.50 lower. Slaughter bulls ended mostly steady after trading sharply higher early in the week. Supply included 35 percent slaughter steers, 9 percent slaughter heifers, 41 percent slaughter cows, 4 percent bulls, with the balance feeders.

Annual Meeting And Cornucopia Unites Legislators With Ag Leaders

Agriculture and other farm organizations.

The cornucopia was held in conjunction with the Council's annual meeting, held earlier in the afternoon. Council members had the opportunity to meet with their local legislators individually between the annual meeting and cornucopia.

During the annual meeting, Representative Ray Bunt, the majority chairman of the House ag and rural affairs committee, spoke to the group.

"We are working on an extensive list of legislation that will benefit the ag community," said Bunt. He thanked the farm organizations for their help with ag issues. "I learn something new about agriculture every day."

Senator William Slocum, majority chairman of the Senate agriculture and rural affairs Committee also spoke during the meeting.

According to Slocum, Pennsylvania provided the largest drought package of any state in the Union this past year. It was also the largest drought relief package ever in Pennsylvania.

"This year we plan to address the inheritance tax issue," said Slocum. "It is the single largest cause for losing family farms. Our caucus is going to make every effort to do away with at least part of that tax."

The Council made amendments to state resolutions benefiting agriculture. These resolutions are used by lobbyist from various farm groups to encourage the legislature to address the current issues in agriculture.

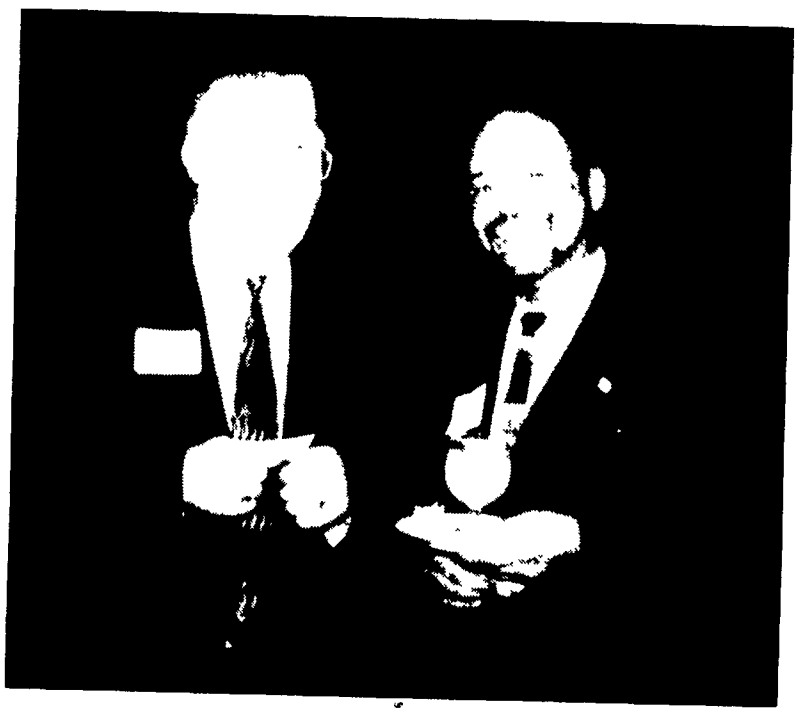
Topics included in the amendments were biotechnology, farmstead property tax relief, and food safety. The Council also established new resolutions for product regulations and standards, stray voltage, nutrient management, farmland assessment law, local amusement tax, agriculture education, and elk damage. Resolutions for addressing federal legislative issues were also addressed.

The Council elected new officers during the meeting. President is Roxy LeVan. Curtis Kratz was elected vice president, and Susan Fox will be the secretary/treasurer.

Charles Brosius was nominated by the Council to represent Pennsylvania agriculture societies as a Pennsylvania State University Trustee. Brosius will be running for Obie Snider's position on the board. Snider decided not to seek re-election.

The Council also voted to endorse Carl Schaffer in his nomination for the Board of Trustees. Schaffer, already a member of the Board of Trustees, will be running for re-election.

PA State Council of Farm Organizations President Roxy LeVan greets the representative from her county, Representative Merle Phillips of Northumberland.



Old aquaintances unite as Representative James Roebuck of Philadelphia introduces himself to Eugene Wingert, Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council, who sold pigs to Roebuck's god parents.

Representative Thomas Armstrong from Lancaster County and Debbie Eaton representing Senator Harold Mowery of Cumberland County greet Pennsylvania Fair Queen Jana Duttry.

Cornell Offers New Interdisciplinary Graduate Training Program In Food Safety

ITHACA, N.Y. -- The Cornell University colleges of Agriculture and Life Sciences and of Veterinary Medicine have launched a new interdisciplinary doctoral training program in food safety that will provide instruction in new methods of detecting, eliminating and controlling pathogens in the food system.

"Graduate students will have access to a variety of world-class facilities and programs at Cornell, ranging from the Cornell Nanofabrication Facility to the Cornell Genomics Initiative," says Martin Wiedmann, Cornell assistant professor in food science and one of the program's organizers.

The program, he says, also will offer unique internship opportunities outside of the traditional academic environment, which could range from training at a biotechnology company to experience with those state and federal agencies charged with development of scientifically based, food-safety policies and regulations.

Faculty mentors for this training program have expertise in the areas of food safety, food and veterinary microbiology, molecular microbiology, bacterial pathogenesis, microbial ecology and epidemiology.

Wiedmann says that applicants should have a strong interest in food safety and a bachelor's degree or a master's degree in any biological science. Applicants with a doctorate of veterinary medicine, or an equivalent degree, are encouraged to apply. Successful applicants will be supported with teaching and/or research assistantships.

For additional information, contact Dr. Kathryn Boor, Department of Food Science, 412 Stocking Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853; e-mail: <kjb4@cornell.edu>; or phone: (607) 255-3111.

using Pioneer 35N05 at a plant population of 31,574. Third place was awarded to Wayne Freeman, Elliotsburg, for a yield of 194.3 bushels per acre using NC+5878B at a plant population of 26,199.

There were less than five entries in the machine harvest class in 1999, so no awards were made.

A complete, detailed listing of the winners and their management practices is scheduled to be published in the next issue of Corn Talk, a section of this newspaper, on March 4.

National Organic Standards Ready

PACIFIC GROVE, Calif. (AP) –Consumers who are gobbling up organic products at an unprecedented rate should have a better idea of what they're eating when the nation's first organic labeling rules roll out this year, a federal agriculture official told farmers Thursday.

"This will not be a perfect rule, a holy grail, but it's a place to start so that farmers and consumers and the government can have some agreement on what organic means," said Keith Jones, who heads the U.S. Department of Agriculture's National Organic Program.

Jones said the rules–expected to take effect this summer–will require organic producers to go through a mandatory planning process, use materials off a restrictive list and get their farming practices verified by an authority.

Enforcement, he said, will be handled by state, county and private agencies that currently oversee the industry with a hodgepodge of rules and guidelines.

"We have empowered certifiers in this rule. But we're also going to ask certifiers to step up to the plate and take action," said Jones, speaking at the Ecological Farming Conference in Pacific Grove, Calif., the nation's largest annual gathering of organic farmers.

Congress called for consistent national "organic" guidelines 10 years ago. But earlier proposals included irradiated and genetically engineered food in the organic categories, drawing more than 280,000 protest letters from consumers and organic farmers.

Jones said the revised rules now match industry standards that exclude irradiated and genetically engineered products.

Katherine DiMatteo who heads the Greenville, Mass.-based Organic Trade Association said that despite existing self-regulation, her industry needs the promised federal regulations.

"Without the government, we would not be able to enforce this program universally," she said.

While the USDA has been grappling with how to define organic, the industry has boomed. Sales reached $6 billion last year, and industry organizations project growth of 20 to 25 percent a year as organic products become mainstream, according to the Organic Trade Association.

Bob Anderson, who chairs the national organic advisory board and heads the 54-year-old organic farming network Walnut Acres in Penn Creek, Pa., said consumers have a lot to gain.

There will finally be a consistent standard, and therefore the consumer will know what's in an organic product and buy it with confidence," he said.

The USDA submitted its proposed rule to the Office of Management and Budget last fall. The OMB is required to publish the rules in the Federal Register in February.

After that, there will be a 60-day Congressional review, followed by an expected 18-month implementation period.

New York Farm Bureau

GLENMONT, N.Y.–New York Farm Bureau, the state's largest general farm advocacy organization, recently contacted the New York Congressional delegation urging support for expanding the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact to include New York State. The need for the Compact has increased as most New York dairy farmers are experiencing rapidly falling prices that are putting family farms in jeopardy.

"There are some New York dairy farmers who may be protected from the falling prices," stated New York Farm Bureau President John W. Lincoln. "Those dairy farmers shipping milk into the Compact region will have the benefit of the Compact's stabilizing effect on prices. New York Farm Bureau believes all of New York's 8,300 dairy farmers should be able to join the Compact."

New York Farm Bureau has been vocal in showing appreciation to New York's delegation for their outstanding efforts during the first half of the 106th session of Congress. The over 30,000 farm family members were pleased by the achievement of Option 1A milk pricing and the extension of the current Compact.

Come And See The New UNI Aerobic Exerciser

at a public meeting on Monday, February 28 at 7 PM
Place: Leola Family Restaurant
365 West Main St. Leola, Pa.
Available with 3 different motors. Nothing like it!!!

1. 110 volt AC heavy duty air cooled motor with a fan.
2. 12 volt DC motor (connects direct to a battery, and uses less than 1/2 the current a unit with an inverter does).
3. Air motor with quick snap on connection.

All the units have the following features

Variable speed control. This is very important. It can do what a 1 or 2 speed unit can not do. Get better results!

Variable Sway Adjustment .A true swaying motion which can be adjusted while in use. This and speed control are very important, because a short and light weight person needs a different swing than a tall or heavy person. It can be adjusted to each person's need for best results.

Ball Bearing Mechanism. Requires less current to operate it and runs quieter. Tests proved it will not start knocking after a few months of usage like other units do.

Soft Cushion Foot-rest. More comfortable than hard plastic, and it needs no cover.

Patent Pending. This unique machine is so far advanced that these features are included in a pending patent.

2 Year Warranty. Since these units are more durable and run on ball bearings, they last longer, and are therefore guaranteed for 2 years, not 1 year like other exercisers.

Made in the USA. Not involved with any foreign mysticism.

A better exerciser for less money

THE LEADER IN THE FIELD

David C. Slusser
General Manager

The members and employees of PA DHIA are to be congratulated for giving our cooperative another profitable year. This was achieved by hard work and constant vigilance on cost control. In view of these efficient efforts, our Cooperation continues to maintain the highest degree of accuracy in useable records going the USDA-AFPL. No DHIA in America takes accuracy more seriously than PA DHIA, whether it be milk weights, butterfat, crude protein, true protein, SCC, MUN, records processing, or field service.

Our consultant service continues to grow in regards to farm visits and educational meetings. Several hundred dairymen have attended our meetings conducted by PA DHIA staff on How our Cows Talk to Us Through DHIA Records, regarding the use of MUN information, and on Barn Owl 2000. No other DHIA in America supports their members with such intense educational programs and farm visits as PA DHIA. Each member who tests for MUN for three months is eligible for one farm visit by George Cudoc, our Consulting Dairyman.

Our Records Processing Center has achieved two major milestones this year. One is Barn Owl 2000. This dairy herd management software is a Windows 95, 98, or NT program that is state-of-the-art software for today's herd managers. It is composed of three programs in one–heifer management, herd management, and lab analysis. You can download your herd information by Internet from our Laboratory and/or Processing Center, and view your information in the form that you want. The second accomplishment of our Processing Center is PC (personal computer) processing. On January 3, 2000 we switched from our IBM Mainframe to a PC, replacing a $500,000 machine with a $20,000 PC. Our new PC program will revolutionize dairy records processing and make mainframe computers obsolete. We plan to market our PC program throughout the world.

Internationally, PA DHIA has been awarded an Emerging Markets contract for a Pilot Project in Poland. Our international program is designed to market our processing software, Barn Owl, Dairy Herd Management Services (farmer to farmer), and when Heifer Net is complete, dairy genetics.

Barn Owl 2000 Demonstration to be Held

David Bigelow
PA DHIA Marketing Manager

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.)–Jim Kulick of Stover Farms, Carlisle, will be offering a free demonstration of the newly developed herd software package, Barn Owl 2000, before and after the PA Holstein Convention. All interested parties are invited to attend this demonstration on Thursday, February 17 from 9:30 am until 12:00 pm or Saturday, February 19, from 9:30 am until 12:00 pm.

Stover Farms consists of 450 acres of owned and 600 acres of rented ground, which includes corn, alfalfa, soybeans, wheat, and timothy. This herd of 170 registered Holsteins average 23,026 lbs. of milk, 731 lbs. of protein, and 810 lbs. of fat. This family-oriented farm is structured and operated mainly by family members Ron Stover, John and Julia Stover, Mark Matula, and Jim and Ann Kulick. Currently, Jim and Ann's daughter, Army, is serving as Dairy Ambassador for the Cumberland County dairy industry.

Upon arriving at Stover Farms, a picturesque view of a successful dairy farm will greet you. The property includes a state-of-the-art greenhouse calf barn, double eight rapid exit parlor and barn with slatted floors. Currently, Stover Farms has a contract on a Marty out of the Ricecrest Kay family.

"Helping to pinpoint high somatic cell cows that aren't showing clinical signs, as well as watching the herd average continually rise, is how PA DHIA records held me to reach my goals," states Jim Kulick, herdsman of Stover Farms. Jim benefits from the services offered by PA DHIA's consulting dairyman. George Cudoc, who helps him to monitor his herd's performance. In addition, Jim is using PA DHIA's new herd management software, Barn Owl 2000, to help him with day-to-day management decisions.

Barn Owl 2000 is a new generation of herd management software with point and click operations that brings the power of Microsoft Windows to your desktop or parlor. For one low price, members receive herd management, heifer management, and the lab analysis programs. Other features include fat, protein, true protein, lactose, somatic cell, and milk urea nitrogen being downloaded into lab analysis directly from PA DHIA, giving results of somatic cell, milk urea nitrogen and other important herd management tools the minute they are available. This feature is especially important for identifying hot cows and ration balancing. All of this is available at $299.95 plus tax.

Be sure to stop by Stover Farms on Thursday, February 17 or Saturday, February 19 to witness what Barn Owl 2000 can do for you. The farm is easy to find and quite handy to the site of the PA Holstein Convention. The Clarion Hotel and Convention Center is just off exit 17 of Interstate 81. Upon exiting the hotel grounds, turn left on Route 11 South, travel one mile and turn left at South Middlesex Road. Proceed across the railroad tracks and turn right on Horners Road and Stover Farms will be on the right.

Please feel free to contact PA DHIA at 1-800-344-8378 with any questions or assistance you may need with your PA DHIA records.

GMO Debate A 'Non-Issue,' Say Grain Managers

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — Most grain suppliers support biotechnology and see the current problems over genetically modified crops as a "non-issue," according to several managers Tuesday.

"It's hard to maintain a campaign against a product that (creates) no damage," said Dan Wolf, president of the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association (PMCGA).

Wolf spoke during a panel of grain elevator and supply managers to about 140 growers and agri-industry representatives. The panel was part of the Pennsylvania Corn and Soybean Conference at the Radisson Penn Harris Hotel and Convention Center in Camp Hill.

Dick Cole of PACMA, Palmyra, noted the issues that were brought up at the recent World Trade Organization meeting in Seattle, Wash. and at recent meetings in Canada regarding GMO — genetically modified organism — crops are a "non-issue" for us, he said.

GMO crops have been altered at the genetic level to provide specific, targeted expressions against weeds or resistance to herbicides. Bt corn that controls European corn borer is one such GMO-type crop. Other crops include the Roundup herbicide ready crops for corn and soybeans.

"Not one buyer asked for non-GMO corn," said Cole.

While some elevators have received a few inquiries regarding availability of non-GMO crops, at this point, Cole told growers, "I would not change planting intentions."

According to the panel, some controversy has been felt by the food processors. The controversy is so strong that it has affected food-grade, human-consumption corn, some of which is marketed for trademarked brands of tortilla chips and other products.

"Wenger's supports biotechnology," said Geoff Finch, purchasing agent for the feed company in Rheems. Finch stressed that Wenger Feeds is responsive to customers. If customers want to go non-GMO, "we'll go non-GMO," he said.

Wenger's has had only one serious inquiry into the availability of non-GMO feed. Right now, there have been no other requests, so the non-GMO program is on hold, Finch said.

Trouble is, not one customer or supplier is "willing to make a commitment up front to go (with non-GMO crops)," said Finch.

Wolf of PMCGA spoke about one major grain supplier that looked closely at the issue and realized what the problems could be. "Do we want to segregate non-GMO crops and hope for a premium price?" he said.

For PACMA, Cole noted that buyers simply want cheap beans more than anything, he said. "If you're producing beans, we'll sell them for you."

Cole believes the concern falls more on the "farmers' side than buyers.'" He's hoping that the public relations people for the big GMO companies "can make it a non-issue."

One industry representative noted that the industry has been modifying crops through genetic selection for a long time. Most crops can be considered "GMO" by that definition.

"This issue will have to die on its own attrition," said Wolf. "There will be no one to continue to beat the drum."

Ethanol Issue

Wolf, however, noted that the real issue facing growers are recent decisions by U.S. Congress to consider pulling away from the use of reformulated gasoline, which is blended with an oxygenate such as ethanol, made from corn.

The reason? Some findings suggest that another oxygenate used, methyl tertiary butyl ether (MTBE), has been detected in drinking water supplies from Maine to California. An Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) Blue Ribbon Panel has recommended that MTBE use be substantially reduced.

However, several bills pending in Congress could override the workings of the Clean Air Act to reduce the use of the blended material, essentially allowing waiver authority to individual governors. If the bills pass, this could have "tremendous impact on the use of corn in the country," Wolf said.

"If we lose all the oxygenated fuel programs, it will be a big loss."

Wolf urged growers to contact the National Corn Growers Association or individual U.S. representatives about the issue.

Speakers at the crops conference included Gene Lewis, United Soybean Board, right and Greg Roth, Penn State corn specialist.

Ag Perspectives — Soybeans

Soybean producers should grasp the potentials of GMO crops, according to the chair of the New Uses Committee of the United Soybean Board (USB).

Growers should "accelerate the accelerating rate of change that GMO can give us," Gene Lewis told those at the crops conference.

A soybean producer from Hardinsburg, Ind., Lewis said the real issue about GMO is "how long will it take for biotechnology to be accepted?"

Lewis noted that growers should do more planning of their destinies. Farmers need to reassess things, "all of us, as a group."

Lewis said that in 1900, farmers made up 38 percent of the labor force and farmed 147 acres on average. By 1950, farmers made up only 12 percent of the labor force and farmed an average of 216 acres. In 1990, farmers made up only 2.6 percent of the workforce yet farmed, on average, 471 acres.

"The emphasis on production agriculture is very apparent in the 20th century," he said.

Since science continues to support new product development, growers should benefit. But every bushel the USB can take out of the carryover, the more the price can be affected.

Agriculture is changing. Instead of the emphasis on a supply-driven economy, the shift is toward a "demand-driven" system, Lewis said.

With the 50-cent per bushel checkoff, out of a year's projected harvest of 3 billion bushels, enough money is generated over 20 years to surely "do something to raise the price of soybeans," Lewis said.

Those include new products such as the "polyoils," by-products such as hydraulic oils from soybeans. The goal is to have eight new soybean products by the year 2005.

Today people are eating more soy foods than a year ago.

A diesel fuel additive uses a mixture of soybeans and additives. It creates a horsepower boost and improves the life of engines.

Another product includes a plastic resin composite used on the panels of a commercial combine company.

The use of industrial soybean oil has increased significantly, Lewis said, from 28 million bushels per year to 54 million bushels in 1999.

Also at the conference, Tony Minnich, Ag Chem, provided information about the new lightbar technology for growers. The lightbar acts with a GPS system to provide precise parallel swatheing for sprayers or other use. The bar can be accurate to about six inches, according to several users, with the right satellite system.

With the technology, growers could feasibly spray at midnight. If kept powered and dry in the cabin, the lightbar can keep swathes almost perfect.

Some lightbars are equipped with actual speed indicators. The information can be downloaded into a computer and more accurate spray records can be kept.

Awards

The Five-Acre Corn Club awards were presented by the PMCGA at the conference. Award winners are included in a separate story.

Also, winners of the annual Pennsylvania Soybean Yield Contest were announced.

First place went to Gary E. Truckenmiller, Northumberland County, with a yield of 73.34 bushels per acre using RR Pioneer 93B53.

Second place went to James R. Hoover, Perry County, with a yield of 71.77 bushels per acre with RR Pioneer 9396.

Third place was awarded to Anchor Farms, Inc., Union County, for Stine 3171-1.

STS cultivars made up 12 percent of the entries; normal, 32 percent; and Roundup Ready, 56 percent. Minimum tillage was used by 60 percent of the entries, no-till by 36 percent, and conventional till by 4 percent.

Corn planters were used by 32 percent of the entries and drills by 68 percent.

Beans were planted May 10 by 44 percent of the entries, May 11-20 by 48 percent, May 21-30 by 4 percent, and June 1 or after by 4 percent.

Those using 30-inch rows made up 24 percent of the entries, 14-15 inch 16 percent, and less than 10-inch rows, 60 percent.

Drills averaged 182,000 plants per acre. Corn planters averaged 156,000 plants per acre.

Those using rhizobia inoculant made up 96 percent of the entries. No one rotary hoed. Ninety-six percent of the growers in the contest did not cultivate. There was little or no lodging reported. One hundred percent of the entrants reported good to excellent weed control.

Regarding fertilizer, 44 percent used fertilizer or manure, 12 percent used some nitrogen, 16 percent used phosphorous, 36 percent used potassium, and 8 percent used sulphur. Seventy percent applied phosphorous and potassium or manure to the previous crop.

Only 16 percent limed in the contest year and 16 percent limed the previous year. Fifty-six percent of the entrants reported a current soil test.

Brown Swiss Association Hosts Annual Calf Sale

FREDERICK, Md.–This year's Mid Atlantic Brown Swiss Calf Sale will be celebrating its 26th year, and will be held on Saturday April 29, 2000 at the Frederick Fairgrounds, Frederick, Md. at 10:30 a.m. This annual sale has gained quite a track record for calves sold. Many have developed into National Bell Ringers, All-Americans, and profitable additions to many herds.

Now is your chance to consign a calf to this sale–check those calf pens and pedigrees and see what you can offer. This sale has been a great place to buy a 4-H project, and has also provided some top-pedigreed calves for the merchandising and investment buyer. We are looking for a strong group of calves that combine a unique blend of production and sound type.

Don't miss this opportunity to get a consignment in this sale. There were several consignments from the 1998 and 1999 sales that went on to do well for their new owners. Many that were shown stood in the first five placings of their class on a state and national level.

If you are interested in consigning a calf, or wish additional information about the sale, please contact: Cindy Warner (301) 371-5206; Dennis Smith (301) 845-6894; Howard Fleming (301) 475-3440; Harold Long (301) 271-7577.

Please don't delay–the sale committee would like to have the pedigrees by Friday March 17, 2000 to get the catalog completed in plenty of time for interested buyers to review. Consignments will be on a "first come-first-serve basis," so don't delay! Grazing Conference Shows How Gold Is In Grass

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — 165 producers recently attended the seventh annual Southeast Grazing Conference at the Solanco Fairgrounds in Quarryville. The theme for this year's conference was "Gold Is In The Grass."

Out of the 165 producers attending the conference, about 30 farmers were new to the grazing arena. Debra Young of West Grove was one of them. Young farms with her husband Charles on Pure-Ayr Farms, where they milk 70 Ayrshires and Brown Swiss.

"I wanted to learn more about maintaining pastures," said Young. "We have 32 acres of pasture that needs replanted, and I wanted to find out how to plant them for the most efficiency."

Young got a lot of information from the speakers about the different grasses to plant and what works on different farms. "The speakers discussed planting plots on your farm to see what grows best before you plant the whole pasture," said Young.

Speakers during the two-day conference covered everything in grazing from planting different grass species for maximum efficiency to breeding cows to be the most profitable grazers. Jeff Wolfe and Dale Neufeld also reported on their personal experiences as dairy farmers who graze their cattle.

"I learned a lot from listening to the dairy farmers, especially Jeff Wolfe," said Dan Delp of Whiteford, Md. "I've known Jeff since he got started in dairying, and I really respected his advice. He has learned a lot and could offer good advice from his experiences."

Delp owns Deep Creek Farm, where they have milked anywhere from 65 to 70 cows. Right now Delp is pasturing both beef cows and dairy replacements.

"I've been grazing for a good while, and I came not only to learn from the speakers, but also from the people attending the conference," said Delp. "It's good to talk to other people who are grazing. It makes you feel less like the lone ranger."

Bonnie Wentworth of Wentworth Farms in Quarryville agreed. She and her husband milk 65 Ayrshires.

"Mastering a grazing operation is a learning process," said Wentworth. "You should always be sharing ideas with each other."

Wentworth's husband attended Monday's sessions, while Wentworth attended Tuesday's conference. She said that Monday's session was just what her husband needed to gear up for this spring.

"There is just something so natural about grazing your cows," said Wentworth. "It's a much more relaxed way of dairying."

"Once you don't worry about achieving the high production numbers, the other things really fall into place. Herd health, breeding ratios, and other performance factors improve. And your bottom line stays solid."

In between the speaker sessions, participants had the opportunity to visit the seven companies who exhibited at the conference. The exhibitors featured the latest in grass species, technology, and feed supplements for grazers.

The conference was sponsored by the Lancaster County Grazers Association.

Concentrated Animal Feeding Operations Need NPDES Permits

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — If you own more than 300 cows, 2,500 hogs, or 40,000 chickens, you may need to apply for a National Pollution Discharge Elimination System (NPDES) permit through the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection.

These NPDES permits were mandated in February 1999 by the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection. They assure that farmers comply with the concentrated animal feeding operation (CAFO) requirements of the federal Clean Water Act.

Farmers have a three-year phase-in period to receive their permit. Any new operations meeting the requirements should apply for the NPDES permit prior to beginning to operate. The goal of the NPDES program is to prevent the operation from polluting Pennsylvania's streams and water supply.

Any operation with more than 1,000 animal units, referred to as a concentrated animal feeding operation (CAFO), is required to apply for an individual NPDES permit. Operations with 300 to 1,000 animal units are eligible for a general NPDES permit. Farms with 300 to 1,000 animal units that are located in special protection watersheds must receive an individual permit because of the higher risk for them to pollute water sources.

An animal unit or animal equivalent unit (AEU) is equal to 1,000 pounds of body weight. The requirements between the general and individual permits vary to take into account both the operation's size and its potential to have an adverse impact on water quality.

"Very few farmers have actually applied for the permits," said Roger Musselman, chief of permit section for the water management program, south-central region of the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection.

Musselman encourages farmers to contact their county conservation office to find out if they need to apply for an NPDES permit. "The NPDES program ties in with the nutrient management act," said Musselman.

Under the Nutrient Management Act, any farmer with more than two animal units per acre should have a nutrient management plan approved by the county conservation district. According to Kevin McGonigal, Nutrient Management Technician for Adams County Conservation District, the deadline to apply for nutrient management plans was October 1998.

"Most farms that needed nutrient management plans have either already had their plan approved or are working on developing a plan," said McGonigal.

The number of animal units on a farm should be identified in the nutrient management plan.

"Once a farmer identifies the number of animal units on their farm, that should indicate whether or not they need a NPDES permit," said Musselman.

The Department of Environmental Protection is counting on the conservation districts that approve nutrient management plans to alert farmers to get NPDES and other permits they need.

"The problem is we don't have any idea how many concentrated animal feeding operations (CAFO) exist in Pennsylvania," said Musselman. "I suspect there are quite a few, but it is really up to the operator to identify themselves and apply for the permits."

According to Musselman, the Department of Environmental Protection will eventually locate the CAFOs that exist in Pennsylvania. But the NPDES program is still new to the department. In fact, Pennsylvania is one of the first states to have initiated a NPDES program to guarantee water quality.

The federal Environmental Protection Agency is reviewing Pennsylvania's general NPDES permit. Since Pennsylvania is a delegated state, it can establish its own permits. However the EPA must approve them.

"One thing our organization does is respond to complaints," said Musselman. "Once we receive a complaint about a concentrated animal feeding operation, we can make sure that operation complies with the necgressmen Tim Holden and Paul Kanjorski to provide a safety net for dairy farmers in the region. The primary vehicle for this support is the Dairy Compact, which provides price stability for dairy farmers in New England at no expense to taxpayers.

We succeeded in reauthorizing the existing Dairy Compact until September 30, 2001, but were blocked from expanding the Compact to include Pennsylvania's dairy farmers. Expanding the Dairy Compact to include Pennsylvania is a top priority of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, Farmer's Union, and State Grange. It is also a top priority of mine and most friends of agriculture.

Agriculture is the leading industry in Pennsylvania and dairy is the most prominent segment of the Pennsylvania agriculture industry. If we do not act to stem the number of failing dairy farms, it will not be long before this will negatively impact the economy of our state's rural areas.

Contracts Take Center Stage At Pork Expo Educational Seminar

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — About 100 hog producers and agri-industry representatives learned Wednesday that it was quite possible, in late 1997, to lock in on $45 per hundredweight prices on some futures contracts for 1998 — the year of the worst hog price recession in U.S. history.

That same year, producers saw prices on hogs plummet into the 'teens.

According to Steve Meyer, director of economics for the National Pork Producers Council (NPPC), the key to survival in the swine business may be to look seriously at futures-based contracts and manage your business accordingly.

Meyer spoke Wednesday morning during the educational session of the 22nd annual Keystone Pork Expo at the Lebanon Valley Expo Center in the fairgrounds.

Meyer provided a lesson in "Marketing 101," pointing out that information on the basics of running a swine operation like a business is available on the NPPC Website at www.nppc.org. The site has a spreadsheet that works on Excel.

Meyer pointed out the importance of timing the decision to sell based on what objective you have. Some research data showed that, historically, it matters little if you select futures contracts, for the most part, at six or 10 months.

Managing, said the NPPC economist, implies decision making. "If you do the same thing all the time, you're not managing," he said.

There are many different ways of managing risks and pricing hogs, whether the producer is looking at cash flow, equity management, or other factors. The key is to find a level that will not put more than 10 percent of the business equity at risk.

A business that works on low equity, high costs of operation, and low prices could be placing the business in peril. Finding ways of cutting input cost, including locking in on low feed prices when available, and examining all the options on futures contracts, could help.

"Know what your costs are and write out an objective for your return on equity," said Meyer. "Get out of the market guessing game and get into something you can control."

"There has been tremendous growth in marketing contracts in the last five to 10 years," said Laura Cheney, assistant professor of agricultural economics at Michigan State University.

In her presentation, "Navigating Hog Marketing Contracts," Cheney noted that in 1997, 57 percent of all hogs were sold under marketing contracts. That number increased to 64 percent last year. Nearly two-thirds of all hogs today are sold under some sort of marketing contract — and the numbers continue to increase.

Producers need to understand the "language" of contracting, said Cheney. There are two different types:

- Marketing contract. This is an agreement with a buyer to sell something in the future. The buyer is the packer, who usually has complete ownership of the animals. This type of contract leaves management decisions to the packer.
- Production contract. This often implies joint ownership, where one firm owns and the other raises the animals. A "producership" agreement is signed.

But keep in mind, Cheney noted, there is no such thing as a "standard" contract. Many variables can be written into them, including short- and long-term agreements that allow producers and packers to "build a relationship."

For the most part, packers and producers who enter the agreements must agree on standards of how the hogs will be raised. Packers are looking for Pork Quality Assurance Level III certification, approved genetics, an environmental assurance program, a quality and specified feeding program, proper facilities, quality hogs, and quality care arrangements.

The contract information is included by Cheney in the book, "Being Competitive & Successful In the Pork Industry," the proceedings from the 2000 Competitive Seminar For Pork Producers, available from the NPPC.

In 1996, a survey was conducted that reviewed what packers enjoyed most about contracts. The packers noted improved plant supply, efficiency, producer relationships, and improved competitive edge as advantages. They noted the downside, too — increased price risk and reduced flexibility.

The survey looked at the producer's side and noted improved prices, market access, and reduced price risk. Disadvantages were potential lower returns and reduced flexibility.

The most common contract was the formula contract, for more than 90 percent of all hogs sold under contract. But in the hog recession, producers were "not getting 40 cents when were in the 'teens," Cheney said. Actually, contract producers fared little better, obtaining perhaps a few cents more per pound.

For those still relying on cash at delivery, those cents can add up.

"Marketing contracts are a risk-management tool," she said. "They are not a solution to imbalances in supply and demand."

Producers still need to examine their objectives.

"It's a tool, but not the only one," Cheney said. Producers need to examine hedges, cooperative structures, and other methods. Contracting is no substitute for price and financial management.

Cheney herself lives on a five-generation hog farm. The farm itself operates under short-term fixed contracts.

Now may be the best time to look more seriously at contracting. According to Lou Moore, Penn State economist, with luck, producers may reach the break-even point mid-year.

Producers keep on getting bigger. In 1999, the number of hog operations with less than 100 head comprised 53.6 percent of total operations but marketed only 1.5 percent of all hogs. But operators with 5,000 head or more comprised 2 percent of operations, yet their hog inventory was 46.5 percent of all hogs. That number was up from 37 percent from last year.

Evaluating marketing contracts and managing risk were some topics at the Keystone Pork Expo. Speakers included, from left, Steve Meyer, director of economics with the National Pork Producers Council and Laura Cheney, assistant professor of agricultural economics, Michigan State.

In 1978, there were 650,000 hog operations in the country. In 1999, that number had nosedived to less than 100,000 operations.

What would happen if the industry lost all the operations with less than 100 head? "It wouldn't do a thing to hog production," said Moore.

The decline in producers will continue, and "it will be mostly in the smaller operations," said the Penn State economist.

For the first quarter, producers selling on the cash market can look toward about 37 cents a pound. In 2000, in the midst of decreasing hog inventory, which is fairly good news to producers, according to Moore, there will be 20 billion pounds of hogs sold, down four percent in 2000. Hog production actually increased 3 percent in 1999.

Meat from cattle will total about 28.3 billion pounds, down 4 percent in 2000. But in 1999, production was up 2.5 percent.

Moore said he doesn't believe the USDA figures on cattle. He believes cattle production will be down two percent at most this year.

Broiler production continues to expand, projected at 31.9 billion pounds in 2000, up 5 percent. In 1999, production was up 7 percent for broilers.

Total meat production will be 80.9 billion pounds, down one percent in 2000. In 1999, total meat production was actually up 3.6 percent.

Hog prices will be about 37 cents a pound for the first quarter this year, better than a year ago "but nothing to brag about," Moore said. Tough times lag ahead. Total farm income will be 7 percent less than 1999, he said.

Corn prices remain low. Though 1999 wasn't a record corn production year (at 9.54 billion bushels), for four years in a row the U.S. has had good crop years. In 1999, average corn yields were about 130 bushels per acre. Pennsylvania producers grow about 74.2 million bushels, with a 1999 drought year average yield of 72 bushels per acre, yet producers use 170 million bushels of corn every year. They need to go outside the state for the additional 100 million bushels required.

And the U.S. has had three really large soybean crops the past three years. In 1999, 2.67 billion bushels were harvested.

The U.S. continues to spend the least money for their food, about 10.2 percent of income. Russia, on the other hand, spends about 50-75 percent of its income on food. Without their vegetable gardens, Russian people would "starve to death," Moore said.

Though the U.S. economy now has undergone the "largest period of economic growth we've ever had in this country," said Moore, with the lowest unemployment (at 4.1 percent) in 27 years, Russia continues to falter. No more exports are being shipped to Russia because they simply can't afford to pay.

Fuel prices will cause some inflation down the road in the U.S., but consumers, who are simply not putting money in savings, are "not worried about the future," he said.

Moore cautions, however, that an adjustment to the booming stock market will have to be made at some time in the future. Some experts believe the market is overvalued by 50 percent. At the time of the stock market crash in 1929, the market was overvalued by "only" 39 percent.

Most economists believe that the growth will continue through the coming year, at 3.7 percent for the year. All this while Russia and some of the blocks of the former Soviet Union continue to falter.

Ken Kephart, Penn State swine specialist, and moderator of the educational events at the Expo, noted that three economists were included at the session. "I think that's a record," he said.

Odor Control

Robert Mikesell, senior extension associate at Penn State, provided information about a recent odor survey of neighbors near swine operations.

Of the 337 surveyed, 219 people — neighbors of seven farms and some who drove by — responded.

The swine producers were asked not to spread any manure in the six-week period of the survey. The survey was used by

Penn State to study the effectiveness of biofilters — methods to reduce swine odor control at the farm. Those methods include floating straw covers over manure storage structures.

About 120 people were not affected by odors, but 60 noted they were. Of those affected, their knowledge of the operation was greater than those unaffected. They reported a wide array of problems, including nausea, headaches, and fatigue.

Mikesell noted there was no way of knowing whether the symptoms reported were "real or psychological." The biofilters worked, but incur some cost.

Leon Ressler, Lancaster County environmental extension agent, spoke about efforts to use a mesh and straw system over a lagoon to cut odors. He also spoke about the effectiveness of using pallet systems containing 80-85 percent coarse oak wood chips and 15 percent composed dairy manure as a wall of trapping odors blown from sidewall housing fans.

The fan/biofilter system worked well, according to Ressler. However, because of proper ventilation, another 25-30 percent more fans may be needed, incurring some cost. The materials used included most off-the-shelf items. Perhaps in the future a commercial system can be put in place.

Ressler also noted that pit fans used with the biofilters work well because they deal with the actual source of the odors. Also, producers must follow an aggressive rodent control plan and weed control to assure biofilter effectiveness.

Pork Bowl

Seven teams from the state competed in the annual Keystone Pork Bowl, featuring 26 4-H and FFA members.

In the final round, Adams County 4-H overcame leader Marion Center FFA, 135-115, to win first place for the first time at the contest.

According to contest administrator Linda Spahr, York County extension agent, there were seven teams.

Marion Center had to lose twice — bested by Adams County 4-H when a Marion Center team member, because of time restraints, had to exit the contest. The member, Nathan Elkin, was crucial to the success of the team through the critical first several rounds.

Frederick County Milkers' Schools

FREDERICK, Md.–Two Milkers' Schools have been scheduled for Frederick County in March. These schools are designed to provide milkers with the latest information on milking techniques and associated practices.

Topics included are anatomy of the udder, milk letdown, somatic cells and the CMT, costs of mastitis, milking equipment performance, causes of mastitis, teat dipping, cleaning milking equipment, treatment and prevention of mastitis, milking techniques, residue avoidance, and much more.

Although the program is targeted to the folks who are milking the cows, herdsmen and herd owners are encouraged to attend with the milkers to allow cooperative learning.

Both schools begin at 10:00 a.m. and conclude at 2:30 p.m. The first school will be held on March 2 at the Mt. Gate Restaurant, Thurmont. The second will be held on March 14 at the Dan Dee Restaurant, Frederick.

The cost for both locations is $20 per person. This registration fee includes lunch and reference materials. The registration deadline is one week prior to each school. Please send check, payable to Frederick County EAC to: Ag Office, University of Maryland Cooperative Extension Service, Frederick County Office, 330 Montevue Lane, Frederick, MD 21702-8200. Maryland All-Breed Calf Sale

FREDERICK, Md. — The Maryland Jersey Cattle Club is now looking for consignments for the third annual Maryland All-Breed Calf Sale. The sale is scheduled for April 15, 2000, and will begin at 12 NOON at the Frederick County fairgrounds in Frederick, Md.

Committee members are busy preparing for this year's sale. In the past years, the sale has produced show-winning calves for 4-Hers and FFA members.

The committee is dedicated to finding show-aged quality calves from all six breeds. Most of the consignments will represent well-known herds in Maryland. But the committee is also looking for consignments from Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Wisconsin. Many out-of-state have begun to look at this sale as having great potential.

Anyone wishing to consign a registered calf born between June 1999 and March 2000, please contact any of the following committee members:

essary permits."

Musselman encourages farmers who think they may meet the requirements of a concentrated animal feeding operation to contact their county conservation district.

"The first step for the farmer is developing a nutrient management plan," said Musselman. "Once the nutrient management plan is approved, the farmer should then contact the regional offices of the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection to find out what other permits are necessary."

Hoof Clinic Held At University Park

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.)–Ask some people to list the most important parts of a dairy cow and very few would even think of the hooves. But to the 375 people who attended the Pennsylvania Foot Clinic at Penn State's Ag Arena on Friday, February 4, good hoof health is very important.

Dairy producers, veterinarians, nutritionists, researchers, agribusiness representatives, and other consultants came to hear dairy industry specialists speak of the various issues that affect hoof health. Nearly 60 hoof trimmers, from as far away as Ontario, Canada, came also to watch hoof trimming demonstrations on dairy cows with various foot problems.

Professional hoof trimmer Paul Neer, Belleville, hosted and coordinated the event along with sponsors from Agway, Monsanto Dairy Business, Roche Vitamins, and Zinpro Corporation. Neer sponsored a similar appreciation clinic two years ago in Belleville. Nearly 250 dairy producers, veterinarians, hoof trimmers, and nutritionists attended that event.

"There are a lot of theories about chutes, chipper tools, and the best combinations," Neer said as he welcomed the crowd, "but I say it [the quality of the hoof trim] is only as good as the guy behind it." Neer, a firm believer in hoof maintenance, then introduced Penn State Extension Agent Dan McFarland who talked about the importance of proper housing and environment for cow comfort.

The morning session ended with hoof trimming demonstrations. Participants moved throughout the Ag Arena to watch ten hoof trimmers demonstrate maintenance and problem hoof trimming.

In the afternoon, Dr. William Seymour, a nutritionist with Roche Vitamins, spoke about biotin and hoof health while Dr. Chris Canale, a nutritionist with Agway, spoke about laminitis and nutrition.

Only occasionally do I find a spare moment–either very early in the morning or very late in the evening–to peruse the pages of what are commonly referred to as "women's magazines."

These are the somewhat domesticated publications offering advice and tips on marriage, children, health, finances, crafts and beauty, with the occasional humor or inspirational piece, obligatory cents-off coupons, and always recipes. Depending on their prime content, some of these publications get a jump on the recipe part with a cover picturing such a gorgeous dessert that you can almost smell the calories.

Such was one I began reading to pass time during an enforced waiting period one recent afternoon. The glossy cover of this beautiful home publication dripped with whipped cream and candybar bits to headline a recipe feature inside dedicated to chocolate.

Chocoholic that I am, I thought I might find some new tasty treat I could whip up to showcase my favorite flavor. Especially with Valentine's Day just ahead, chocolate is in the forefront of many people's minds. But after a quick look at the recipes that followed, I could only wonder.

Does anybody every make those glamorous recipes?

And, when do they find the time?

Spare me, please, from recipes that start with three separate lists of ingredients. Especially if among those lists are the likes of cognac, heavy whipping cream, almond paste, or more exotic pantry items such as capers, anchovies or pimentos.

If the ingredient list isn't too oppressive, I might at least make it as far as the directions.

Unless I get hung up on instructions like "roll out and cut with a 1" cookie cutter–makes 12 dozen." Or, "cook and stir constantly, over medium heat, until bubbly." Or, until smooth. Or, until gelatin is dissolved. Or, "slowly stir heated mix into beaten eggs." Or, "take a springform pan." Or, one that glibly suggests "in a large skillet, cook the sugar until it melts and turns golden."

I don't think so.

One friend of ours absolutely cringes at even seeing the directions for pie dough. "Using a pastry blender, cut shortening into flour until mixture is the texture of cornmeal." In fact, she declares she would rather make ANYTHING than bake a pie. I don't mind doing pies and, if I actually get into that mode, will roll out several pie shells at one time. Making six is no more time and mess than making one.

On the other hand, they have very nice and handy ones in the freezer section of your local supermarket. No pastry blending to the texture of cornmeal, no rolling, no falling apart. No clean up.

Indeed, give recipes that include directions like "scrub and bake in moderate oven" (baked potatoes), "stir-fry vegetables for five minutes," or "place ingredients into greased casserole and bake" (macaroni and cheese, the grandsons' favorite).

Not far from us lives a fellow farm wife who has won regional acclaim and top prizes at numerous baking contests. Not only are her confections delicious, they are beautiful as well–cakes with painted scenery and sculpted pie dough. I am positively in awe of her talent.

As for me, the lifestyle of milking cows is time consuming to the point that I have happily re-thought many of my one-time hangups about cooking from scratch. For instance, instant mashed potatoes (which in youthful idealism I once vowed I would never resort to making) are one of my favorite convenience foods. Especially when they're made, of course, with only real milk and real butter. And absolutely no real lumps.

So I'll admit it. My favorite cooking directions begin with a simple admonishment.

Valentine's Tips

Valentine Gift Wrapping

Show off your gift from the heart with fun valentine gift wrap. Take any small box or container and wrap with decorative paper. Use baskets or bowls lined with colorful napkins. Stack your treats on a plate or tray, overwrap with colorful plastic wrap and tie on a beautiful bow. Let children help decorate with stickers, crayons, and markers.

Chocolate Shavings — To make shavings, let the baking bar stand in a warm place until thoroughly warm but not melted. Using a vegatable peeler, make short strokes for a shaved effect. For a more splintered effect, use cool rather than warm chocolate.

Featured Recipe

Liza Haas, the Perry County Dairy Princess, submitted this recipe, which is perfect for the Valentine's Day Season. She suggests enjoying the chocolate treats with a chocolate milkshake, the perfect way to satisfy even the biggest chocolate-holic craving.

Chocolate Linzer Hearts

1 cup butter, softened
½ cup sugar
1 tsp. vanilla
2 eggs
1 cup hazelnuts, toasted, skinned and ground
½ ounce semisweet baking chocolate, finely chopped
2 ½ cups all-purpose flour
1 ½ tsp. teaspoons ground cinnamon
½ tsp. ground nutmeg
½ cup raspberry jam
1 ounce semisweet baking chocolate, melted

Beat butter and sugar in large bowl with electric mixer on medium speed until light and fluffy, or mix with spoon. Beat in vanilla and eggs until smooth. Add remaining ingredients except jam and melted chocolate. Beat until well blended. Cover and refrigerate 1 hour (dough will be sticky.)

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Roll ¼ of dough at a time between pieces of waxed paper until ⅛-inch thick. (Keep remaining dough refrigerated until ready to roll.) Cut with 2-inch heart-shaped cookie cutter. Cut small heart shape from center of half of the 2-inch hearts, if desired. Place on greased cookie sheet.

Bake 7 to 9 minutes or until brown. Remove from cookie sheet to wire rack. Cool completely. Spread about ½ teaspoon raspberry jam on bottom of whole heart cookies; top with cut-out heart cookie. Drizzle with melted chocolate. Let stand until chocolate is firm. Yield: 3 dozen cookies.

Heart Health and Fake Fats

February is National Heart Month. Heart disease is the number one cause of death in the United States. Millions of dollars have been spent on research over the last half century, resulting in major improvements in all aspects of heart care, from earlier detection of risk factors such as blood cholesterol and homocysteine levels to techniques that repair clogged arteries without surgery.

Many studies have reinforced the relationship between diet and heart disease. The incidence of strokes and heart attacks are greater in countries where the diets are high in foods containing saturated fat such as meats and cheeses.

Diet recommendations have evolved from research examining how various fatty foods affect blood lipid levels, specifically LDLs (the bad cholesterol) and HDLs (the good cholesterol). Foods high in saturated fat and trans fatty acids have been shown to raise LDLs and lower HDLS. The fat found in fish and olive oil has been shown to raise HDLs while lowering LDLs, a positive result.

Fat is an essential component of our diet. While most of us get more than we need, limiting fat intake to less than 10% of total calories may result in skin lesions, increased illness and vitamin deficiencies in fat soluble vitamins. A, D, E, and K, some of which are antioxidants that keep our eyes healthy, reduce certain cancer risks and delay cell breakdown.

The Dietary Guidelines for Americans recommend that fat calories be less than 30% of our total calories, about 600 calories or 65 grams when consuming about 2000 calories a day. Recommendations for persons with high cholesterol, diagnosed heart disease or other risk factors limit fat intake to 20-25% of total calories.

Food producers have responded to Americans desire to reduce fat intake by offering low fat versions of many of our foods. Some, such as 1% milk or leaner ground beef, have become staples, whereas low fat cookies have not fared as well. Fat enhances flavor and adds texture to foods, challenging manufacturers to find substitute ingredients that maintain the characteristics of the original product.

Recently foods fake fats have begun to appear on supermarket shelves in foods traditionally high in fat. Olestra or Olean®, a product of Proctor and Gamble, is probably the best known because of the national opposition mounted by the Center for Science in the Public Interest several years ago. Found in WOW potato chips and other snack foods, olestra is not absorbed by the body so it adds no calories and is excreted in much the same manner as fiber. Two much olestra can cause some abdominal distress and loose stools as well as limiting fat soluble vitamin absorption. It is not recommended for persons with existing GI diseases. Most consumers eat chips with other foods so the side effects are not commonly found and WOW snacks are found in most grocery stores today.

Benecol®, Taking Control®, and Phytol® are spreads (butter substitutes) that have been shown to reduce blood cholesterol levels in a yearlong study when two to three servings a day were eaten. Made from wood pulp or soy, these plant sterols are absorbed and contribute calories but not fat to the diet. At present, these spreads are more expensive than butter or margarine. Benecol® is packaged in 1 tablespoon servings rather than the traditional soft spread tub. No side effects have been reported.

Benefat® is the trademark for salatrim, a lower calorie fat found in chocolate chips and other confections. Containing five calories per gram rather than the nine calories per gram of fats, salatrim may reduce calorie and fat intake when consuming sweet treats. Cholesterol levels and vitamin absorption are not effected and no side effects have been reported.

Are fake fats for you? The decision should be based on your desire to limit fats in your diet–whether to lose or control weight, reduce cholesterol or just maintain a low fat intake for overall good health. You may decide that you'd rather control your fat or calorie intake with natural foods and moderation, in my mind the best approach. However, Americans love foods high in fat and sugar.

Olestra and salatrim containing foods will allow diners to enjoy snacks and desserts lower in calories and fat, both recommendations encouraged by the American Heart Association. Plant sterols may help folks with high cholesterol to reduce these numbers without medication. It sounds like the easy way out–having your cake and eating it too. Fake fats may not encourage better diet selections, but can possibly decrease a consumer's risk for heart disease, still a positive outcome.

Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princess Fell For Program At A Young Age

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

AIRVILLE (York Co.) — Rebecca Kilgore of Airville is living proof that the "Little Dairy Miss" program generates future stars in the dairy princess program.

17-year-old Kilgore was the York County Little Dairy Miss in 1991-92 with then-dairy princess Penny Jordan Snyder.

"I always looked up to her and thought she did such a good job," said Kilgore. So, when the committee approached her about running for princess last May, she decided to follow in Snyder's footsteps.

A year later Kilgore is not only the York County Dairy Princess, but also Pennsylvania Alternate Dairy Princess.

"I never expected to do so well at the state pageant," said Kilgore. "I kept beating myself up during the competition, thinking I could have done everything better."

At the end of the pageant, Kilgore was really pleased with the job she did. "There were a lot of excellent girls there," said Kilgore. "It was really neat to hear my mom screamed when they called my name."

Kilgore is the daughter of Doug and Pam Kilgore. Doug farms with his parents Gene and Doris Kilgore on a 120-cow dairy farm. Kilgore has two siblings, 15-year-old Raechael and 6-year-old Christopher.

Kilgore's mom Pam has been active in the dairy promotion committee over the years, serving as York County coordinator for four years. Now Pam stays busy helping Rebecca with both her county and state activities.

"People keep telling me that I have no idea how proud my parents are of me," said Kilgore. "They don't get mad at me when I miss a bunch of school, and they even drove me to dairy princess activities when I was too sick to drive myself."

Kilgore has been all over the state with her dairy princess activities. But some of her favorite happened right in York County during the 250 anniversary of York County.

"I got to help with Manchester Old Time Days," said Kilgore. "I had a milk mustache picture taken with Secretary Sam Hayes and the county commissioners for the commemorative booklet."

Kilgore spent the day taking milk mustache photos for children attending Old Time Days, which was held in August.

She also got to meet Miss York County Vanessa Jordan when she went to Clearfield Elementary School. The school was participating in a cafeteria decorating contest.

"I gave them cow coloring pictures to hang up and handed out milk carton erasers," said Kilgore "Their theme for the cafeteria was 'Mooving into the Millennium with milk.' "

On the state level, Kilgore has attended several meetings and spent a week at the infamous Farm Show. "I was the only one out of the three state dairy princesses who didn't get sick."

Kilgore shows off her "Yield to the princess" license plate cover on her car. She has spent a lot of time in that car traveling from promotion to promotion.

She also helped the local Dairy Council hand out milk steamers at both the Harrisburg Marathon and the Philadelphia Marathon Health Expo.

"I really enjoyed going to Philadelphia for the marathon," said Kilgore. "Now I actually know the difference between a cappuccino, latte, and espresso. And I can make them."

Kilgore got to meet people from all around the country and throughout the world during the marathons. "A lot of people didn't even know what a dairy princess was," she said.

Kilgore plans to visit local elementary schools during the spring. The two York County Alternate Dairy Princesses, Michelle Walker of East Berlin and Holly Rankin of Red Lion, help Kilgore to meet the state incentive requirements and will be visiting local schools, too.

"It's really nice to have two county alternates who can help out when I am busy doing state activities," Kilgore said. "One day there were even three promotions in the county, and we were scattered all over."

After graduating from high school, Kilgore will attend the Rose Hulman Institute of Technology in Terre Hoate, Indiana. She wants to be a chemical engineer.

"Chemistry has always been my favorite subject," said Kilgore. "The engineering part comes in because I don't want to teach — I want to make things."

Kilgore plans to work in veterinarian pharmaceuticals. "Although I won't be directly working in agriculture, I will be helping develop products that farmers can use," she said.

Kilgore stands with one of her favorite 4-H projects, a Holstein heifer named Rapzbery.

Kilgore's little brother Christopher is pretty proud of his big sister and her crown. He accompanies her at some of the promotions.

HOMESTEAD OILS

Although being dairy princess may not help Kilgore in the chemical engineering industry, she does feel that she has tremendously benefited from the program.

"The people I met and the things I've done have given me a broader sense of what's going on in the world and in the dairy industry," Kilgore said.

"I've gotten more involved in

Land O'Lakes Holds National Cookie Election

ARDEN HILLS, Minn.–Americans are passionate about cookies, according to a new cookie survey conducted on behalf of Land O'Lakes About three quarters of Americans surveyed (70 percent) consider themselves cookie lovers, with more than 93 percent of them enjoying cookies more than once a month.

To celebrate America's love of cookies and the traditions of baking and voting, Land O'Lakes is holding the Land O'Lakes Cookie Classic, a nationwide election for the best-tasting family cookie recipes and traditions. The grand-prize winner will receive a $25,000 cash prize.

Honoring Tradition

"Just like voting, gathering with family and friends in the kitchen to bake is a time-honored American tradition," said Lydia Botham, director of the Land O'Lakes test kitchens and consumer affairs. "Americans pride themselves on their right to vote and the Cookie Classic offers a chance for the whole family to share that feeling as well."

All across the country, Americans of all ages will have the chance to vote for the best cookie candidate, in person at a regional event or by absentee ballot on the Internet. Kids can share the excitement while learning about the election process.

Entry Information

From now through March 24, families across the country are invited to submit their treasured cookie recipes and traditions, stating in 50 words or fewer, "This cookie recipe is a special family baking tradition because . . ." Entries will be accepted by mail at the Land O'Lakes Cookie Classic, P.O. Box 39101, Chicago, IL, 60639 or online at www.landolakes.com.

All entries should include a previously unpublished cookie recipe made with LAND O LAKES® Butter. For a complete set of rules, send a self-addressed stamped envelope to the Land O'Lakes Cookie Classic, P.O. Box 39101, Chicago, IL, 60639 or visit the Land O'Lakes Web site at www.landolakes.com.

From all the entries received, Land O'Lakes will choose six cookie candidate recipes that best exemplify America's baking tradition and ask consumers across the country to vote on their favorite candidates.

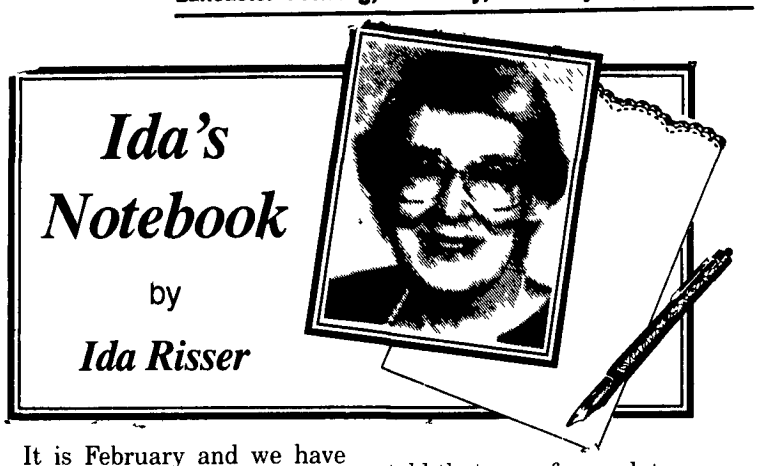
Get Out The Vote

Your readers can vote for their favorite cookie by visiting a Land O'Lakes Cookie Classic campaign stop in one of three markets, Atlanta, Seattle and Minneapolis, in May. At each primary event, Land O'Lakes will invite consumers to sample two of the six cookie candidates and encourage them to vote for their favorite cookie. For those consumers who don't live in one of the three markets, absentee ballots will be available online at www.landolakes.com, beginning in May. At the close of the Land O'Lakes Cookie Classic primaries, the six candidates will be narrowed to three, one per regional event.

Honoring America's Best

Those three outstanding cookie candidates will have the opportunity to showcase their culinary skills in June, when they will bake their family's special, original cookies at the Land O'Lakes Test Kitchens in Arden Hills, Minn. Samples of all three cookies will then be sent via overnight shipping to be judged by cookie experts across the country. Votes will be tallied and a grand-prize winner chosen and announced the following week

One grand prize winner will be honored with a $25,000 cash prize and two runners up will each receive a $5,000 cash prize. All winning recipes will be available on the Land O'Lakes Web site at www.landolakes.com.



It is February and we have snow as do many other people. Our son opened our driveway twice for us. This year I get to shovel a little snow as my husband is housebound. He wishes he could get out.

During the winter I try to plan automobile trips so that I do not have to drive on snow or ice. Then unexpected things came up and I had to make two trips on an unplowed long lane. I'm always glad to be home again.

On a snowy Sunday afternoon I read a history of pioneer settlers of southeastern Pennsylvania. They endured many hardships. Sometimes it took a ship six months to cross to Philadelphia from Rotterdam.

With several hundred people on the boat, over such a long period of time, they often ran out of food and ate rats and mice. Many became ill or starved and were buried at sea. The story is told that one of my relatives, on the trip across the Atlantic Ocean, lost the father and a 12-year-old boy became head of the family.

Often there were friends or relatives already here in the 1730s and they helped newcomers build a shelter and get started in a new world.

Long ago I was in a group where we were asked to list our blessings. I mentioned that I really appreciated that my ancestors had the fortitude and sense of adventure to leave a familiar setting and cross the ocean. Other people felt this was an odd blessing but I feel the same today.

One of my forefathers crossed alone and then a few years later went back to the village of Gommersheim in Germany for his family His youngest son, Valentine Shreiner, is the five times great-grandfather of former President George Bush.

ANSWER — G. Sweitzer, Airville, wanted recipes for gray hubbard squash. Thanks to a Lancaster Farming subscriber for these two recipes.

Mashed Winter Squash

Preheat oven to 375° and scrub a 3 to 4 lb. Hubbard or other winter squash. Place the squash on a rack and bake it until it can be pierced easily with a toothpick. Cut in half, remove seeds, peel the squash, and mash the pulp.

For 1 cup of squash, add the following ingredients:
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon brown sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon ginger
Warm cream or orange juice

Beat mixture well with enough warm cream or orange juice to make it a good consistency. Place in a serving dish and sprinkle with either raisins or nut meats and ¼ cup crushed pineapple.

Squash Pie

2 ½ cups cooked or baked squash (pulp)
¼ teaspoon ground cloves
¾ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon ginger
½ cup sugar or honey
2 tablespoons molasses
5 eggs
1 cup heavy cream or undiluted evaporated milk

Blend the cooked squash with ½ cup cream. Place the puree in a large bowl and with a wooden spoon beat in the spices, salt, sugar (or honey), and molasses.

In a separate bowl, whisk together the eggs and the other ½ cream. Blend this mixture into the squash mixture.

Preheat oven to 450°. Pour the filling into a 9 or 10-inch unbaked pie shell and bake for 10 minutes at 450°. Then reduce temperature to 325° and bake for 45 minutes or until done.

In meantime, brown sausage meat. Drain. Soak croutons in milk about 5 minutes. Add to sausage. Add peas and seasonings. Drain baking dish. Use mixture to fill squash. Return to oven and bake 20 minutes.

Mashed potatoes sprinkled with cheese may be used as a topping if you want to stretch your dish.

Fresh Sausage

18 lbs. fresh pork in cubed-size pieces
5 tbsp. salt
3 tbsp. sage
3 tbsp. pepper
1 tbsp. sugar

Moore's father used to spread all of the meat on a metal topped table and then sprinkle the seasoning over it. He then just kept turning the meat until it was all mixed thoroughly.

The meat should then be ground either at the butcher and through a home meat grinder. Moore says the sausage was delicious. She cautions against having the meat too coarse. If it is too coarse, she recommends grinding it again.

Sand Castle Brownies

⅓ cup chopped nuts
½ cup semisweet chocolate chips
⅓ cup flaked coconut

Pumpkin Delight

1 cup brown sugar
½ cup pumpkin
3 well-beaten eggs
1 large can Pet Milk
1 tsp. each of cinnamon, nutmeg, and cloves.

Mix all, put in 9X13 pan, sprinkle 1 boxed yellow cake mix over pumpkin mixture, melt 2 sticks of butter, drizzle over top. Sprinkle ¾ cups pecans on top. Bake at 350° for one hour.

Pumpkin Delight

¾ cup plus 2 tbsp. of cold water, divided
2 tsp. unflavored gelatin
6 large eggs, separated
1 ½ cups granulated sugar, divided
2 ½ cups cooked pumpkin puree
1 cup lowfat milk
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. ground cinnamon
½ tsp. ground ginger
3 tsp. vanilla
1 tsp. cream of tartar
1 cup vanilla or gingersnap cookie crumbs

In a large saucepan over medium heat, bring about 2 inches of water to simmer. Meanwhile, in a small mixing bowl, sprinkle unflavored gelatin over ½ cup cold water to dissolve and set aside. In a metal bowl large enough to fit neatly over the simmer saucepan of water, beat egg yolks with a whisk or hand-held electric mixer until well-blended.

Gradually add half the sugar, making sure to mix well until the mixture is thick and pale, at least 4 minutes. Add pumpkin, milk, salt, cinnamon, and ginger, continuing to blend with each additional ingredient. Set the bowl over the simmering water, making sure to stir constantly with a spatula for about 20 minutes, until thoroughly cooked and blended.

Remove the bowl from the heat source and whisk in vanilla and reserved gelatin in water. Transfer the mixture to a clean bowl and refrigerate for about 30 minutes to cool, but not set, the mousse.

In a heatproof glass bowl large enough to fit over the same saucepan of simmering water, blend the egg whites, cream of tartar, remaining half of sugar, and remaining ½ cup of water.

Place the bowl over the simmering water and use a hand-held electric mixer set at a low speed to constantly whip the mixture for about 5 minutes of cooking and blending. Increase the mixer speed to high and continue to cook the mixture for another 4 minutes. Remove the mixture from the heat source and let cool about 5 minutes. Gently fold the meringue into the cooked and cooled pumpkin mixture. Divide half of the pumpkin mousse among a dozen dessert dishes. Sprinkle each service with the coookie crumbs and top with remaining half of the pumpkin mousse.

Here's different suggestion from another reader.

Pumpkin Torte

24 graham crackers, crushed
⅓ cup sugar
½ cup butter (melted)
2 eggs (beaten)
¾ cup sugar
1 pkg. (8 oz.) cream cheese
2 cup pumpkin
3 egg yolks
½ cup sugar
½ cup milk
½ tsp. salt
1 tbsp. cinnamon
1 envelope unflavored gelatin
¼ cup cold water
3 egg whites
¼ cup sugar
Cool Whip

Mix grahams, ⅓ cup sugar, and butter. Press into 9X13 pan. Mix eggs, ¾ cup sugar, and cream cheese. Pour over crust. Bake 20 minutes at 350°. Cook pumpkin, egg yolks, ½ cup sugar, milk, salt, and cinnamon until mixture thickens. Remove from heat. Add gelatin, dissolved in ¼ cold water. Cool. Beat egg whites, ¼ cup sugar, and fold into pumpkin mixture. Pour over cooled baked crust and chill. To serve, top with Cool Whip.

ANSWER — K. Moyer, Summerville, wanted to know the difference between Sure Jel and Clear Jel. Thanks to Virginia Zimmerman, who answered that Sure Jel is for making jelly, while Clear Jel is for making things like Danish desserts or for thickening fruit and juices. There is also instant Clear Jel, which you must put with sugar before mixing with fruit. She buys Clear Jel in the bulk section of her grocery store.

ANSWER — A reader wanted the recipe for the ultimate cheese cake. Here is another version of the "Ultimate Cheesecake" from Lioda Matyas from Bloomsburg. The recipe is from her mother, who has had it for more than 40 years.

The Ultimate Cheese Cake

Ingredients:
4 8-oz. pkgs. cream cheese
¾ cup of sugar
6 eggs
3 teaspoons PURE vanilla extract
CRUST:
Crushed graham crackers or graham cracker crust
1 stick butter
TOPPING:
1 pint sour cream
¼ cup sugar
2 teaspoons PURE vanilla extract

Combine 4 packages of cream cheese, ¾ sugar, eggs, and 3 teaspoons of vanilla in a large bowl. Using an electric hand mixer, beat until smooth.

FOR CRUST: Crust is put into springform pan. First, melt one stick of butter and enough graham cracker crumbs to cover pan together. Press with fingertips inside pan to evenly cover area.

Pour mixture into crust-layered pan and bake 350 degrees for 35 to 40 minutes or until firm, not brown.

Remove from oven and let stand.

FOR TOPPING: Mix sour cream, ¼ sugar, and two teaspoons PURE vanilla extract. Mix and pour over cheesecake. Return to 350-degree oven for 10 more minutes.

ANSWER — K. Moyer, Summerville, was looking for a meringue that gets high. Thanks to the reader who sent in this recipe.

Meringue

3 egg whites
1 tsp. warm water
¼ tsp. cream of tartar
6 tbsp. sugar
2 tsp. cornstarch

Separate eggs when cold but let warm to room temperature before beating. Make sure beaters and bowl are clean and not greasy.

Add warm water to egg whites and beat on high speed until frothy. Sprinkle in cream of tartar. Beat again. Reduce speed slightly and gradually add sugar and cornstarch. Quickly return to highest speed and beat until sugar is dissolved, and very stiff and glossy peaks form. Under beating causes brownish liquid drops and meringue to shrink after it's baked.

Pile meringue on pie, going around edges first and being careful to "seal" the meringue to the crust edge. This helps prevent shrinkage and pulling away during baking.

Bake at 325° for 12 to 15 minutes or until golden brown. Too hot an oven reduces height of meringue.

Remove from oven and cool on a rack at room temperature away from draft. Cooling meringue too fast causes it to pull from the edges and shrink.End of file

ANSWER — Gail Isennock wanted a recipe for thin, crisp wafers covered in chocolate. Pollyanna Eby from Belleville suggested using equal parts of pure milk chocolate and "dipping (or covering) chocolate." The mixture can be used to cover wagers, pretzels, pretzel sticks, peanuts, maraschino cherries, marshmallow, and Ritz crackers with peanut butter in between. She says they're wonderful when dropped on wax paper and placed in the freezer overnight

Prevent Ice Damage

Ice dams are the build up of ice usually at the eaves or valleys of a building, which are the result of snow melting on the roof and sliding down to the eaves, where it re-freezes. Repeated occurrence of this cycle causes a build up which can result in ice backing up under the shingles on the roof resulting in water entering the house, causing considerable damage to interior spaces. This condition can also be caused by the accumulation of leaves and debris in the gutters, which can contribute to the ice build-up and subsequent damage. The winter storms in the northeast in 1993, 1994, and 1996 caused substantial amounts of damage, much of which can be attributed to ice damming.

What can a building owner do to reduce the risk of damage from ice damming?

1) Make sure gutters are clean and free of debris, and downspouts are open and unobstructed.

2) Be sure attic spaces are properly insulated. It is important that heat from the house not be allowed to escape into the attic space. Proper ceiling insulation will help prevent this. Carefully seal all ceiling penetrations such as light fixtures and other wiring.

3) Be sure attic spaces are properly ventilated Soffit and gable ends should be open and free of obstructions. If blown-in insulation is used in the attic, check to be sure that soffit vents are not blocked.

4) In new roofing or when replacing an old roof, have the contractor install an ice dam barrier This is a membrane which is applied directly to the roof decking, which goes up the roof from the edge to a point no less than 12 inches inside the inner face of the exterior wall, over which the shingles are installed. In some extreme climates, this membrane should extend even further.

Careful attention to attic insulation and ventilation, and where possible, the installation of an ice dam barrier, will go a long way in reducing the amount of damage experienced during extreme winter weather.

Local Nursery School Demonstrates An Easy Valentine's Craft

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEW OXFORD (Adams Co.) — What mom or dad doesn't love getting homemade crafts from their kids?

When kids come running home with their Valentine, mom proudly posts it on the refrigerator. Years later, when the children are all grown up, she still find those glue-pasted, tattered gifts of love.

Valentine's Day offers the perfect opportunity for kids to show their parents how much they love them.

Sixteen four-year-olds, along with teacher Karen Souders and helper Patty Sieg, at the Emory United Methodist Community Nursery School recently made a simple Valentine's Day craft for their parents.

The nursery school has been around for sixteen years and has always been directed and taught by Souders. She and Sieg teach three classes — two four-year-old classes and one three-year-old class — each term.

What you'll need to follow the pattern is a large red heart cut out of construction paper. The heart should be about 10 inches wide. You'll also need four 1-inch strips cut out of a 8"X11" piece of paper and four smaller pink hearts cut out of construction paper. The smaller hearts should be about three inches wide.

The first thing the children did was fold the four pieces of paper in 1-inch sections, folding the paper back and forth to create a zig-zag effect.

Once they were finished making the legs and arms out of the paper strips, they drew a smiley face on the large red hearts. You can use crayons, markers, or a pencil to draw the face.

After the face was finished, the children pasted the tip of each paper strip onto the heart, making them appear as arms and legs.

Once they finished pasting the arms and legs onto the heart-shaped body, they pasted the four smaller hearts onto the ends of each paper strip. The hearts represented the feet and hands of the Valentine.

Parents are sure to love this simple but crafty Valentine's Day gift. The bouncy, smiling Valentine brings a smile to anyone's face.

Breata Weaver demonstrates folding the four 1-inch paper strips to make the zig-zag legs and arms.

From left Jocelyn Riser, Jacob Ford, and Curtis Harman follow Mrs. Souder's directions for making the legs and arms of the Valentine.

Kilgore is a senior at Red Lion Area Senior High School. She is grateful to her teachers for being supportive of her dairy princess activities.

"They've been really lenient in allowing me to get my work done," she said.

Kilgore is involved in the musical, National Honor Society, Civics Committee, Physics Olympic Team, and played varisity field hockey. So far, she has only missed 15 days of school due to dairy princess activities.

On the farm, Kilgore helps take care of her show animals, unloads hay in the summertime, and occasionally helps milk when she's needed. She owns seven Holstein animals that she shows at area fairs and the York County 4-H round-up.

Kilgore was in the 4-H Dairy Club for nine years. She was on the dairy judging team for several years, placing in the top five at the state competition in 1998. She also participated in a national dairy judging contest in Louisville, Ky., in 1998.

Thinking back over her dairy princess reign, Kilgore is glad that she decided to run last May. "I always have fun and learn new things," said Kilgore. "I haven't had a bad experience yet."

Let Master Gardeners Help You Prepare For Spring

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.)–Now's the time to take advantage of the expert help being offered by Penn State Master Gardeners at their spring seminar, Saturday, Feb. 26, from 9 a.m. to noon in the hall of the Central Presbyterian Church in Downingtown.

Pruning, repairing your law, propagating plants, and beginning a vegetable garden are the topics which will be covered. Each of these session will be open to home gardeners' questions, with Penn State Master Gardeners from Chester County supplying the answers.

Refreshments are provided, parking is free, and admission is only $5 when received by Feb. 21, or $7 at the door. This is a great way to meet your local Penn State Extension folks. The official mission of the Master Gardeners is to help homeowners deal with those pesky gardening problems.

The timing is perfect to find out how to prune your shrubs and trees to manage any winter damage, as well as to help steer your plants toward vigorous growth this spring. Just a few snips here and there can make all the difference. Master Gardeners will tell you how.

And who doesn't have some bald spot in their lawn after this past summer's drought? You can hear how to revive your lawn–reseeding and fertilizing will be covered in depth. There will also be a presentation on possible alternatives to maintaining that lawn, for those who want to reduce their mowing.

How to propagate shrubs and geraniums will be discussed, too. You can save money by multiplying what plant material you already have. It's easier than you think.

Easy-to-grow vegetables will also be explored. Experienced vegetable gardeners will share their growing tips and help you get started with a vegetable garden of your own. You can learn from their mistakes, and benefit from their experience.

What better thing to do while still in winter's cold? Start thinking about spring, and meet your Chester County Master Gardeners. They can show you what kind of help you are entitled to get from them through your local extension office.

Master Gardeners are community volunteers trained by Penn State extension agents. Once they complete their training, Master Gardeners begin volunteer service. They cooperate with service agencies and community groups on a wide range of gardening projects. This popular seminar series is just one of those projects.

As part of the service they provide, Master Gardeners help educate individuals and groups in plant selection; weed, insect, and disease identification; composting; landscape design; pest control; park improvement; community gardening; and many more areas. If you have a particular need or question, just call the Extension Office at (610) 696-3500.

To register for the spring seminar, call that same number, (610) 696-3500. They will also give you directions to the Central Presbyterian Church in Downingtown.

Dairy Of Distinction Seeks Nice Looking Farms

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Do you take pride in maintaining your dairy farm? Does your farm project an attractive, wholesome image to consumers? If so, the Dairy of Distinction Program of Pennsylvania, New York, New Jersey, and Vermont is looking for you.

The Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program that oversees the Distinction program was first started in 1983 in Pennsylvania. The Dairy of Distinction recognize the hard work and dedication of the farmers who maintain attractive farms.

The purpose of the program is to instill a greater sense of confidence in the wholesomeness of dairy products, thus increasing sales.

Farms that apply are judged on the roadside appearance of building, grounds, and surroundings, since this is what our dairy product consumers observe as they drive by the farm.

The cleanliness of the barnyard, feed areas, and manure management are all areas taken into consideration when a team of judges takes a look at your farm from the road. Your milk cooperative or handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

Judging is conducted during the month of May. Award winners are announced during local June Dairy Month activities. To qualify for consideration, you must be actively dairy farming and shipping milk.

Del-Jame Farm near Hamburg in Berks County is a 1999 Dairy of Distinction winner. Since the program began in 1987 in Pennsylvania, more than 700 farms have been given this farm beautification award. Entries are now being received for the year 2000 program. Take time to enter your farm now.

Applications are available for Pennsylvania dairy farms from Michael O'Conner, 324 Henning Building, Dept. of Dairy and Animal Science, Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802. Phone: (814) 863-3913.

New York State applications are available from Carol Keene-Ainsille, 3993 Jordonville Road, Jordonville, NY 13361. Phone: (315) 858-2770.

For New Jersey applications, contact Joy Ricker, 91 Beemer Road, Sussex, NJ 07461. Phone: (973) 875-4803.

For Vermont applications, send to Elisa Clancy, Vermont Department of Agriculture, 16 State Street, Drawer 20, Montpelier, VT 05620-2901. Phone: (802) 828-3835.

All applications must be completed and returned to your respective state secretary by April 15, 2000.

The Dairy of Distinction program is financed in Pennsylvania by dairy farmers through the American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East and the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program in cooperation with many local agribusiness organizations. The program is conducted with advice and help from the Penn State Cooperative Extension.

HOW IS YOUR FARM SCORED?

Northeast Dairy Farm Beautification Program Inc.

Awards will be based upon neatness, good maintenance, and other factors that can be controlled by the farmer. Attractive background scenery should not be weighted heavily in judging. All judging observations should be made from a vehicle at one or more points on an adjacent public highway. If the farm is off the road, the judging will take place from the nearest lane. Judging should give equal consideration to old wood construction and new construction of metal or concrete block.

The award program may be used for subsequent advertising or promotion activities for dairy products or dairy farming. Farmers who apply for the award agree that if selected they will cooperate with these promotion activities and make all reasonable efforts to maintain both the exterior and interior of heir properties in an acceptable manner.

HOW THE APPLICATION WORKS

The owner or operator of the dairy farm should sign the application and send it to the Dairy of Distinction state secretary by April 15.

HOW THE JUDGING WORKS

Judging teams will visit farms during the month of May. Farms will be judged each year as the award is presented on an annual basis. Any dairy failing to maintain appearance standards will be asked to remove their signs. The Dairy of Distinction signs remain the property of the committee, not the property of the dairy farmer. All farms must achieve a compliance score of 90 percent on their Dairy of Distinction score card. Your cooperative or milk handler will be contacted to approve your milk quality.

RULES FOR THE DAIRY OF DISTINCTION AWARD

No more than three signs should be displayed from the sign frame or post, and all shall be of a style, general size, and quality comparable to the Dairy of Distinction sign. Sign should be secured on all sides to avoid wind damages.
4) Signs shall not be moved to other premises. New owners of a Dairy of Distinction farm must apply to retain the sign
5) Replacement of damaged signs is at the committee's discretion.

Perennial Flowers Workshop Outlines Weed Control And Overwintering

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — Both weed problems and overwintering damage can cost the landscape and nursery industry significant dollars each year.

Weeds can choke the growth of desired plants, while not properly overwintering can cause tissue damage to the plants.

Dr. James Sellmer spoke about "Weed Control" and "Overwintering" during a workshop on "Perennial Flowers" held at the Mid-Atlantic Fruit and Vegetable Convention several weeks ago.

Dr. Sellmer is an assistant professor in horticulture at the Pennsylvania State University. He specializes in ornamental horticulture extension, working with extension agents and people in the landscape and nursery industry.

According to Sellmer, the biggest issue that growers face in weed control is that they haven't developed a plan for the weeds around the parameter of their garden or facility.

"A lot of times I get calls from people who have weed problems that have really gotten out of control. They're looking for a silver bullet to get rid of those weeds," said Sellmer. "You got to be really diligent in knowing what weed problems are going to affect your operation."

Growers should take preventive measures against weeds in a crop before the crop is planted. That means coming up with a weed control plan.

"You need to sit down to evaluate your program yearly and determine what weed problems you have," said Sellmer. "Different weeds will grow different years. The drought conditions this year brought new weeds."

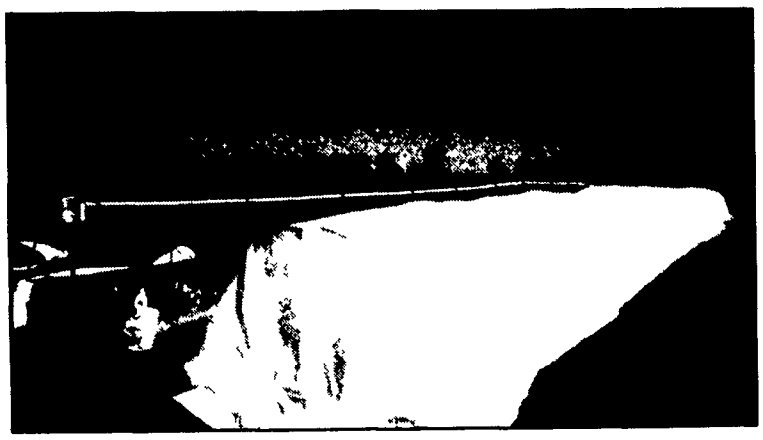
The three-part plan that growers should employ includes eliminating weeds in and around the growing area and killing seeds or vegetative parts before planting, preventing weed control in and around the growing area, and eliminating weeds as they appear.

The weed control methods that Sellmer reviewed during his presentation included both physical methods and chemical applications. The physical methods were cultivating, mowing, mulching, hand pulling, selecting a weed-free growing medium, and planting cover crop. The chemical methods were classified in the following categories — preemergence or postemergence, contact or translocated, selective or nonselective, and fumigants.

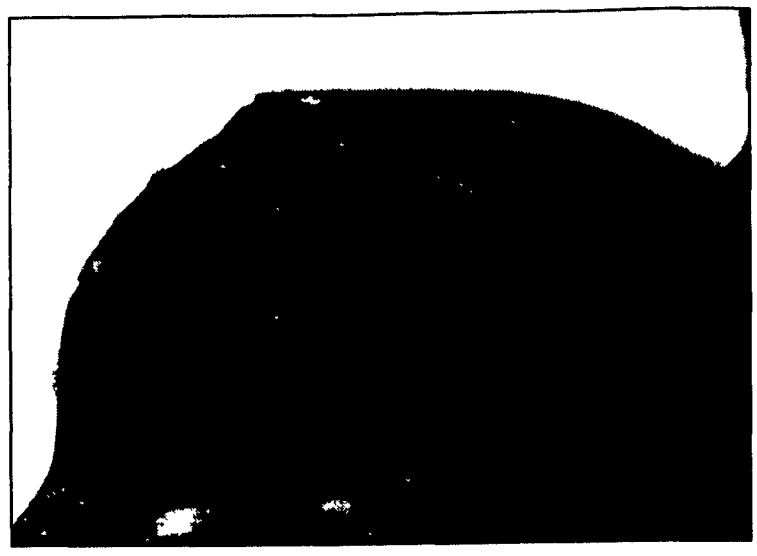
"You need to know what weeds are going to impact your production," said Sellmer. "That will allow you to know what practice to use — whether it is cultivating, hand pulling, or chemical use. It will also help you decide which chemicals to apply."

Cultivating is an effective way to prevent weed problems, although it can be time consuming and must be repeated throughout the season. Mowing is most commonly used to control weeds in fields. It is also time consuming and can cause damage to crop plants when equipment operators run on them.

Mulching can be applied to limit weed growth around high-value crops. It can prevent weeds from seeds that germinate at or near the soil surface. However, a thicker layer of mulch may be harmful to landscape ornamentals and can provide habitat for seeds to germinate.



Excess moisture and animal damage are the two biggest problems in overwintering perennials. Ideal overwintering covers should provide insulation, but allow the grower to check for damage control during the winter.



Polyhuts are one form of cover used for overwintering perennials. The polyhuts allow for ventilation, irrigation, and secondary, interior covers.

Hand pulling is used to eliminate weeds that escape preventive measures. A weed-free growing medium, like perlite or peat, can help the grower to avoid weed problems in container-grown plants.

According to Sellmer, total weed control is possible, but can cause problems. "Soil erosion, pesticide and fertilizer runoff, and impassable fields after a rainfall are all associated with total weed control," said Sellmer. Both cover crops and mulching can prevent against these problems.

During his presentation on "Overwintering," Sellmer reviewed factors involved in overwintering. They included fertilization, irrigation, pest control, and the timing of covering and uncovering plants.

"If you're new to the business, you need to consider how much overwintering you need to do," said Sellmer. "It depends on whether you're going into retail or production."

For retailers, traditionally the goal has been to be done selling product and have it out of stock by winter. Those working in production don't expect everything grown to be sold the first year or even the second year. However, Sellmer and his colleagues from Penn State recently conducted a survey of growers in the industry. One of the trends they found was that more retailers are overwintering than in the past.

"You need to consider what plants you're overwintering," said Sellmer. The Penn State study found that growers considered ornamental grasses to be the most difficult perennials to overwinter.

"We did the survey to find out how overwintering is affecting the industry and how the industry is dealing with overwintering issues," said Sellmer. "Based on the study, we are discussing researching ways to better overwinter ornamental grasses. Then we can give growers suggestions."

According to Sellmer, the structures and techniques in overwintering haven't changed over the years. The bottom line is that the system growers choose will affect how they manage it.

He suggested that growers ask these questions about their overwintering systems: Does it provide adequate protection? Does it reduce moisture loss, thus reducing tissue damage? Is it easy to handle and manage? Can it be adapted to the growth of your stock? Is it economical?

Overwintering systems commonly used in the industry include structureless systems, polyhuts, and polyhouses. According to Sellmer's study, structureless systems are the most popular systems among growers.

Structureless systems involve consolidating plants and surrounding them with kraft paper, bales of straw, white polyethylene film, a thermal blanket, or any combination of these covers.

Although this type of system is the simplest solution, it provides limited protection. Sellmer suggests that any coverings be placed from north to south for best protection.

According to Sellmer, this type of system traps in moisture, preventing tissue damage. However, troubleshooting rodent problems or moisture loss is difficult because of the coverings.

Polyhuts are typically five to six feet wide and four feet tall with low hoops and polyethylene plastic coverings. Polyhouses are taller and wider than the polyhuts. Both allow for ventilation, irrigation, and secondary, interior covers.

Sellmer suggests determining the overwintering method based on the plant hardiness. "We have a lot of plant materials, and we don't know how hardy each plant is," said Sellmer. "Plants vary drastically in hardiness."

Other overwintering issues Sellmer spoke about included fertilization, irrigation, pest control, and weed control. Healthy plants that are "not excessively vigorous" are better able to withstand winter. So Sellmer suggests fertilizing enough to sustain normal growth but not enough to push growth.

Irrigating the growing area to its capacity prior to storage will provide the moisture and humidity to prevent freeze-drying. In hoop systems, growers will probably also need to irrigate during the winter.

According to Sellmer's study, excessive moisture and animal damage caused the biggest losses for growers who overwintered their plants. Sellmer suggests applying bait around houses and taking preventative measures against rodents. He also suggests checking the growing area and getting floor weeds under control before overwintering.

Armchair Shoppers Beware: Home Shopping Poses Some Risks

TUNNAHOCKEN (Wyoming Co.)–Today's technological advances allow consumers to shop almost anytime and anyplace from home. But it's important to know the rules and tools that will protect you from con artists and unprincipled business folks trying to make a fast buck, says a consumer scientist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences.

"While there may be great opportunities for good buys and unusual items, shopping from home does have its risks," says Cathy Bowen, assistant professor of agricultural and extension education. Shopping from home includes online/e-commerce, telemarketing, mail order, door-to-door, yard sales, and flea markets.

"Here are some key points to remember when shopping from home," she says. Know who you are dealing with. "Find out the seller's location and reputation," Bowen says. "What is their street address and phone number? Do they belong to a trade group, or take part in a program such as the Better Business Bureau's program for online merchants at www.BBBOnLine?"

Protect your privacy. Bowen recommends that home shoppers only provide personal information if they know who is collecting it, why they are collecting it and how the information will be used. Good Web sites should allow you to choose whether and how your personal information will be shared.

Pay the safest way. "Know the different options for paying and use the one that offers the best protection," Bowen says. When shopping online, thieves can intercept credit card, debit card, or other payment information. Information stored in company databases also may be retrieved by hackers or dishonest employees.

The National Consumers League (NCL) recommends credit cards as usually being the safest way to pay, because you can legally dispute the charges if the product or service is misrepresented or never delivered. You also have limited liability if your card number is stolen or misused. If the company doesn't accept credit cards, NCL says, you might consider using an escrow service that will hold your money until you are satisfied with the purchase.

If you do a lot of shopping on the Internet, Bowen suggests having a designated credit card with a low credit line specifically for that purpose. Know what you are buying. "It's important to get a complete description of the product or service, and all of the terms of the transaction," she says.

"When buying used items, make sure they meet safety standards." When making purchases online, The National Consumers League suggests you print out all of the information for online transactions, including product description, delivery information, privacy policy, warranties and confirmation notices. Think through your purchase.

"Don't act on impulse or because of pressure," Bowen says.

Know who to complain to. "If you have a problem, and cannot get satisfaction from the company, find out what government agencies, industry organizations or other groups can help you," Bowen says. "The Federal Trade Commission offers an online complaint form at http://www.ftc.gov/ftc/complaint.htm."

To raise consumer awareness of protection and education efforts being made nationwide, Feb. 14-20 has been set aside as National Consumer Protection Week. This year's theme, "Armchair Armor: Shopping Safely From Home," addresses the growing technological advances and issues that allow today's consumers to conveniently shop from home. American Heart Association Urges Quick Action To Save Victims Of Cardiac Arrest

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) –When someone goes into cardiac arrest, it becomes a desperate race against the clock to save his or her life. Every second counts.

Tragically, each day several hundred cardiac arrest victims die before they reach the hospital. In fact, the national survival rate for sudden cardiac arrest is less than 5 percent.

February is American Heart Month, and the American Heart Association is urging all Pennsylvanians to help improve the cardiac arrest survival rate by taking quick action when faced with a cardiac emergency:

1. Know the warning signs of a heart attack and symptoms of cardiac arrest in order to recognize a medical emergency when it occurs. The warning signs of a heart attack are: uncomfortable pressure, fullness, squeezing, or pain in the center of the chest lasting more than a few minutes; pain spreading to the shoulders, neck or arms; chest discomfort with lightheadedness, fainting, sweating, nausea, or shortness of breath. A heart attack can lead to sudden cardiac arrest. Symptoms of cardiac arrest are different: the person collapses and loses consciousness, he or she stops normal breathing, and loses pulse and blood pressure.

2. Upon recognizing any heart attack or cardiac arrest symptoms, call 9-1-1 immediately to access the emergency medical system. Too many people go through denial and, as a result, wait too long before seeking medical attention.

3. Give cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) to victims of sudden cardiac arrest because it can help keep someone alive until emergency help arrives. CPR is important because it maintains vital blood flow to the heart and brain which helps sustain the victim until defibrillation (electric shock to the heart) can be administered.

"Since 70 to 80 percent of all cardiac arrest emergencies occur in the home, knowing CPR may help you save the life of a loved one," said Dwight David, M.D., president of the Pennsylvania Delaware affiliate. "By taking these crucial steps, Pennsylvanians can give cardiac arrest victims a second chance at life."

This American Heart Month initiative is part of the association's Operation Heartbeat program, designed to strengthen the cardiac arrest chain of survival nationwide. Working with hospitals, members of the emergency medical services (EMS) community, first responders and others, the association hopes to improve the cardiac arrest survival rate in communities across the country.

"Approximately 700 cardiac arrest victims die every year in the United States," said Davis. "Through this American Heart Month initiative and our Operation Heartbeat program, we're hoping to make more Pennsylvanians aware of the problem of cardiac arrest, and show them how to help strengthen the cardiac arrest chain of survival in their communities."

More than 95 percent of Americans who suffer sudden cardiac arrest die before reaching the hospital, which equates to almost 250,000 deaths annually. The American Heart Association estimates that at least 50,000 lives could be saved each year if the sudden cardiac arrest national survival rate could be increased from the current 5 percent to 20 percent or higher.

According to Davis, heart attack is one of the primary causes of cardiac arrest. Other causes can be electrocution, drowning, respiratory arrest, choking or trauma. When a person goes into cardiac arrest, the heart's electrical impulses become chaotic. This irregular heart rhythm, called ventricular fibrillation, causes the heart to stop suddenly.

"Automated external defibrillators, or AEDs, are electronic devices that deliver an electric shock to the heart to restore its natural rhythm," said Davis. "Early defibrillation is a critical link in the cardiac arrest chain of survival, and the only treatment to correct ventricular fibrillation.

Reviews Important Year In Ag Lancaster County Extension

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Farmland preservation increased the same year as 5,280 meetings were conducted in the county, with an attendance approaching about 50,000 people. More than 3,000 4-H'ers carried about 5,000 4-H projects.

This all took place last year, "a very successful year" for the county extension service, said John Schwartz, Lancaster County Extension Service director.

Schwartz spoke last week at the 87th meeting of the extension service at the Farm and Home Center.

At least 300 people attended the social and meeting, featuring lots of Lancaster County food commodities served by various representatives.

Schwartz outlined the accomplishments of Lancaster County extension, a "very important year in Lancaster County agriculture," he said.

Schwartz noted that four years ago the county conducted the first of several meetings, asking the question: will Lancaster County be the next Los Angeles? Will farmland be purchased and developed, leaving nothing but strip malls and housing projects?

Fortunately, with help from "people and organizations, the state legislature and the Lancaster county commissioners," said Schwartz, "farms are being preserved." And cooperative extension is "conducting programs to help maintain farming as a viable occupation."

The past year also marked 30 years of the Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program (EFNEP), now 31 years old nationally. The past year the nutritional education advisers "worked with 235 families with 510 children under the age of

At the extension meeting, several volunteers spoke about the significance of the EFNEP program in their lives and the lives of others.

EFNEP staff continues to conduct joint programs with the Water Street Rescue Mission, Even Start, Vantage House, and Clare House. Super cupboards were organized at Salvation Army and St. Paul's United Methodist Church, Schwartz said, "as a way to reach more adults through group instruction."

developed concerning parenting, child care, financial management, foods and nutrition, and food safety. Resources included 1,600 copies of "Toddler Topics," more than 500 copies of "Visits With You and Your Baby," and more than 600 copies of "Family Time" were distributed to families in the county.

Additionally, Schwartz noted, "312 child care providers attended meetings to receive more than 780 Department of Public Welfare training hours, 12 food safety sessions were conducted for volunteer cooks, and 210 volunteers, representing church groups, fire companies, fair stands auxiliaries, and other community groups" attended the sessions.

Schwartz noted the strengths of the Master Gardener program, which has more than 90 active Master Gardeners. The gardeners donated more than 5,300 hours, which included answering home horticultural questions, plant diagnosis clinic, and other programs. Without their help, according to Schwartz, it would take more than two full-time assistants to do the same work.

There is a total of 138 4-H clubs in the strong 4-H program in the county, with embryology standing out in particular. And 4-H programming is continuing at Barnes Hall, the county's youth detention center.

In the county's traditional 4-H program, according to the extension director, thee county teams placed first in state competition: the senior livestock, the senior meats, and the junior horse judging teams.

Through the Great Grain Adventure summer urban 4-H program in 1999, 128 inner-city youth took part.

"Cooperative extension, I feel, is aggressively developing educational programs to address the issues facing Lancaster County," Schwartz said. New educational efforts continue to improve rural and urban relationships, public policy, and environmental issues.

The treasurer's report was presented by Gary Dean, board of directors member. According to the county extension's annual report, state and federal government support for the county extension totaled $1.27 million with a 1999 budget of $437,000.

The monies available included $437,000 and $5,817 earned in interest.

For the year, expenses totaled $424,346. That left a total margin of $18,470, according to Dean.

Michelle Rodgers, Cooperative Extension Service capitol region director, noted that the service made a very successful request to the state legislature, coming away with $2 million in addition to the annual funding.

The funding has helped create three new positions in the capitol region, she said. They include a nutrient management specialist in York County, a heard health position in Lebanon County, and an integrated pest management staff position working for the green industry in Dauphin County.

Extension "has had a strong presence in our community," Rodgers said. They remain "on the cutting edge of the needs of communities."

There is also a vacancy for a dairy agent in Adams County, which the service is trying to fill.

Lancaster County, she noted, has a Website up and running. The Internet address is http://lancaster.extension.psu.edu.

New extension directors elected at the meeting included the following:

- Northwest: Harry E. Hershey Jr., Mount Joy. Hershey manages a poultry farm. He is married to Joan and they have two children, Steve and Sharon.
- Northeast: Ernest W. Mast, Morgantown. Mast operates a grain crops, vegetables, and beef farm. His wife is Rhonda and they have two children, Gavin and Nicole.
- Southwest: Wilmer L. Shertzer, Columbia. Shertzer operates a dairy and livestock farm. Shertzer is married to Esther and they have three children, Beth, Mark, and Sam.
- Southeast: J. Ray Ranck, Paradise. Ranck manages a poultry farm and used to operate a dairy. He is married to Reba and they have three children, J. Robert, Rhonda, and Ryan.
- Southern: Dorothy I. Strickler, Quarryville. Strickler manages bee hives. She is married to Samuel and they have three children, Matthew, Sara, and Amy.

At the meeting, Nellie Cruz, secretary, was honored for 10 years of service to the county cooperative extension.

ANSWER — A reader to know how to care for a poinsettia so that it would bloom again next year. Thanks to Richard Herring for his answer. Step one: poinsettias need indirect sunlight at least six hours daily. Place a curtain or light shade between the sun and the plant if direct sunlight can not be avoided. Temperatures should not exceed 70°F, not fall below 55°F.

Step two: Keep poinsettias away from heat and drafts as the soil must stay moderately moist. Water thoroughly when the soil feels dry to touch. Do not let the plant stand in water.

Step three: after blooming, fertilize every two to three weeks with a balanced household fertilizer to maintain foilage.

Step four: when the top colored growth (bracts) lose their appeal, cut the plant back to about 8 inches. Though stark in appearance, by May the plant will have new growth. By June 1st, you should repot the plant. Use heavily organic soil. Place the plant outdoors once the weather is warm.

Step five: the plant will begin producing flowers in the fall. Starting Oct. 1, be sure the poinsettia has at least 14 hours of total continuous darkness each night and about six to eight hours of bright sunlight each day. The plant will not bloom properly without this stict regimen. Night time temperatures must not be below 60°F.

ANSWER — A reader wanted information on gardening magazines. Thanks to Richard Hearing for providing the name of "Fine Gardening." The toll free number for the magazine is 1-800-888-8286.

A nice light living room with chair rail and a downstairs bath with paneled barn siding complete the downstairs floor plan.

Ascending the original stairs from the kitchen to the second floor there are 3 bedrooms with closets. Wide pine floors, chair rail, deep window sills create a light and homey ambiance. A full bath/dressing area is accessible from all bedrooms through a hall. Original stairs lead to the third floor attic area.

A cemented basement houses all the mechanical elements of this house. oil baseboard heat supplies the winter warmth along with a coal stove in the summer house family room.

The nicely landscaped 7.7 acre site zoned Agricultural supports a large 2 room workshop along with a large flat barn. All buildings are easily accessible via a semi-circle stone driveway.

The setting and the dwelling provides the opportunity for a casual country lifestyle.

Federal Government Urges Fleets To Use Biodiesel

WASHINGTON, D.C.–In an effort to jump-start use of alternative diesel fuel, the USDA recently encouraged fleet managers in the national capitol area to use cleaner-burning biodiesel in their vehicles.

Leading by example, the USDA told fleet managers that it reported its own use of biodiesel to obtain credits toward alternative fuel vehicle purchase requirements, taking advantage of recent changes in the Energy Policy Act (EPAct).

The USDA's Agriculture Research Service (ARS), located in Beltsville, Md., just outside Washington, D.C. has been using the alternative fuel in 68 of its vehicles since August, including a dump truck, bus, combine, several tractors, and other vehicles. Based on its positive experience with biodiesel, ARS hosted a seminar in January with area fleet managers to review the environmental and economic benefits of biodiesel and to generate greater interest in the alternative fuel.

Biodiesel is a nontoxic, clean-burning fuel made from a variety of sources–primarily soybean oil. It is biodegradable and essentially free of sulfur and aromatics. Biodiesel reduces virtually all regulated emissions and has a pleasant odor (commonly compared to popcorn or french fries) when burned in diesel engines.

"This marks the first time a government agency has organized such an event on its own accord," said Joe Jobe, executive director of the National Biodiesel Board. "It's a demonstration of the incredible interest we are finding in biodiesel from fleets around the country." There were more than 70 participants present at the seminar.

Federal officials emphasized the considerable economic benefits of using biodiesel, in particular when used to obtain credit toward alternative fuel vehicle purchase requirements under EPAct. "Biodiesel is the least expensive fuel that will comply with EPAct," said Pam Serino, a chemist with the Defense Energy Support Center (DESC), who also was present at the seminar. DESC, which operates under the Department of Defense, recently issued policy guidelines for biodiesel, urging agencies within the Department, including the armed forces, to use biodiesel to meet their EPAct requirements.

A 1998 amendment to EPAct allows covered fleets to receive one credit for every 450 gallons of biodiesel purchased and used at levels of 20 percent or higher in fleet vehicles over 8,500 pounds gross vehicle weight. These credits can satisfy up to 50 percent of a fleet's alternative fuel vehicle purchase requirements.

Serino estimated the cost of biodiesel to be in the range of $1.50 to $2.50 per gallon, depending on quantity. The most common use of biodiesel is in a 20 percent biodiesel/80 percent conventional diesel blend, known as B20. The incremental increase in fuel costs for B20 is more than offset by the reduced expenditures in other areas because B20 is used in existing diesel engines with existing fueling infrastructure. B20 also delivers similar power, fuel economy and performance as petroleum diesel.

According to the National Biodiesel Board's Joe Jobe, "Biodiesel's biggest benefit to fleet managers is its ability to provide an immediate and seamless way to convert an entire diesel fleet to a clean-burning alternative fuel."

ARS Deputy Area Director John Van de Vaarst stressed that all of his vehicles are running on the regular maintenance schedule and have experienced no operational difficulties. He also reported that his employees experienced significantly less eye irritation while using vehicles running on B20 compared to vehicles burning conventional diesel fuel.

Another benefit of biodiesel is the pleasant smell. One employee literally put his nose right up to the tailpipe of a diesel bus that was running on B20 and took a big whiff of exhaust. "He could not detect a trace of diesel smell from the tailpipe," said ARS Deputy Area Director John Van de Vaarst, "He was amazed."

Biodiesel significantly reduces emissions that contribute to global warming and health risks. B20 reduces emissions of carbon dioxide by 16 percent, carbon monoxide by 20 percent, and particulate matter by 22 percent or more.

Holds Internet Q&A

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Dan Glickman used a question-and-answer session on the Internet to press his case that Congress needs to make "fundamental changes" in the 1996 Freedom to Farm law.

"My highest priority is to improve the conditions for small and medium farms in this country," Glickman replied Tuesday to a questioner from Ashland, Kan., who told Glickman that farmers "need help fast."

The hour-long Q&A, which was sponsored and moderated by McClatchy Newspapers, was a first for Glickman. McClatchy editors screened questions that were posted by the public to an Internet site and passed 11 of them to Glickman for him to answer.

The majority dealt with the farm economy and the struggles of family farms. On Monday, Glickman announced that President Clinton's 2001 budget would include proposals to provide additional income assistance to farmers during periods when commodity prices are low.

Grain prices collapsed in 1998 and economists expect little improvement in 2000. The problems in the nation's farm economy "must be addressed through fundamental changes in the farm bill, expanded access to foreign markets for our products, better crop insurance, and ensuring an adequate supply of fairly priced farm credit," Glickman told the Kansas questioner.

Accurate Seed Placement Is What We Do Best!

Simple Design - Low Maintenance
Quality Built

Large Two-Bushel Seed Hopper for extended planting between fill ups Slide-on seed hopper lids for convenient access to the hopper

Unmatched Seed Spacing Accuracy results from White's edge drop seed disc design which virtually eliminates seed delay as the seed leaves the seed cell and then free falls just 18 inches to the seed trench

High Rate, State-Of-The-Art Seed Sensors monitor row unit functions and assure you are getting the seed population you select

Seed Tube Clip: Positively centers the seed drop tube between the opener discs Improves seed spacing and depth control as well as extending the life of the seed drop tube

Short, 18-Inch Seed Drop Tube is curved to compensate for the forward travel of the planter to gently place the seed into the soil This short drop also enhances accurate seed spacing and minimizes rough ricocheting and handling

WHITE 6100 Planters

Low Pressure, Positive Air Metering System gently singulates seeds, protecting the fragile coat and assuring uniform plant spacings This technology also eliminates the haphazard spewing of soybean seeds from mechanical seed metering mechanisms found in a grain drill

Depth Control Adjustment: Planting depth is easily set with the use of the depth control knob Each one half turn changes the depth of seed placement by 1/8 inch Reference rings indicate each inch of seed depth

Closing Wheel Adjustment Cam permits the closing wheels to be adjusted to each wheel tracks an equal distance from the center line of the seed trench Soil is firmed uniformly around the seed for superior moisture retention

Angled Closing Wheels gently firm soil around the seed The Staggered Closing Wheel position reduces plugging in heavy residue, improves seed trench closing in no-till and reduces seed trench sidewall compaction

Walking Beam Gauge Wheels maintain 50% of the weight on each wheel Seed depth is controlled in rough ground by equalizing planting depth at all times

On The Mark, Get Set, Grow!

The 6100 Series Pull-Type Planters.

Precision farming starts with precision seed placement. And that's exactly what you'll get with White's 6100 Series. Its unique row units feature an exclusive air-metering system that's designed to singulate every seed. Low air pressure and edge-drop seed discs along with a short, gentle, 18" seed drop ensure precise seed placement for maximum germination.

Adaptable To Any Tillage Situation.

The 6100 Series is available in rigid and vertical fold frame models. A strong, welded-tongue design and massive 7" x 7" frame easily handles the demands of no-till and other planting practices.

This season, get the planter that places each seed where it'll grow the best — and perform the best. Stop by your AGCO• White Planter dealer today.

LUCK//NOW MIXER FEEDERS "P" SERIES

Since 1979 LUCK//NOW Mixer Feeders have been recognized as one of the most dependable and strongest built mixers in the field.

To enhance its existing line of Mixer Feeders LUCK//NOW introduces the "P" Series of Mixer Feeders with six models ranging in size from the Model 300 with a mixing capacity of 310 cubic ft., to the Model 900 with a mixing capacity of 900 cubic ft.

The Large diameter augers in all the "P" Series Mixer feeders are capable of giving the mix required, from rations with well cured, long stemmed legume-type hay, to mixes with green grass, and mixes with silage and commodities. Better milk production, better weight gains and greatly improved animal health are just some of the results of a finely-tuned feed ration.

Top Producers Choose Knight!

Congratulations to the La-Foster Farm

Terry and Gerald Foster are very proud of their record-breaking cow, Lucy, and rightly so. She produced 75,260 pounds of milk in her last lactation. They are also pleased with their Knight Reel Auggie® mixers, which, combined with the Foster's excellent management practices, have propelled the La-Foster herd average to the #1 milk production status in North Carolina. There is no comparison to the complete, palatable blend from a Knight Reel Auggie, with its patented reel and auger blending combination. Why else would the La-Foster Farm choose only Knight to feed their record-setting herd?

NEW HOLLAND

Building on a good thing

You might recognize the engines, drivelines and axles on the new New Holland TS tractors. They have excellent reputations based on past performance. Thousands of customers have put these components to hard use and benefited from their performance and durability.

So, New Holland wasn't about to change a good thing. They made other improvements to these 70- to 90-PTO-hp tractors instead – like increasing the horsepower, improving the comfort of the cab, relocating the fuel tank for added convenience, adding a top road speed of 25 mph, upgrading the electrical system and adding outlets and modernizing the styling.

Better see these exciting 70- to 90-PTO-hp TS tractors for yourself. And find out how good design can become even better.

NEW HOLLAND

Three Farm Families Inducted Into Hall Of Fame

ANNAPOLIS, Md.–Three farm families were inducted into the Governor's Agriculture Hall of Fame of Maryland recently during ceremonies at the Maryland Agriculture Dinner at Michael's Eighth Avenue in Glen Burnie, sponsored by the Maryland Agriculture Council, Inc.

In an evening dedicated to the celebration of Maryland's rural heritage, two awardees could trace their family history to the arrival of the Ark and Dove in 1634.

John D. and Mary Briscoe, who operate an 852-acre grain and tobacco farm in Calvert County, called Stonesby, and Mr. Briscoe's brother, James and his wife Cassandra, who operate a 1,146-acre grain, cattle, hay and tobacco farm, The Cage, also in Calvert County are descendants of Dr. John Briscoe, who arrived in Maryland 366 years ago and began farming the land. Both operations incorporate soil conservation, nutrient management and forestry plans, and both families are life-long leaders within local farm, church and community activities.

The third family inducted into the Agriculture Hall of Fame are Joseph and Nona Schwartzbeck of Carroll County. They operate a 1,000-acre dairy and grain farm, called Peace and Plenty Farms, on which they raise and show home bred cattle locally and nationally, assist young farmers with equipment, livestock and counseling, and are actively involved in the Carroll County Fair and State Fair.

Maryland Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Virts, D.V.M. presided over the induction ceremony and presented each family with a Governor's Citation. Numerous state and local elected and appointed officials joined in celebrating the state's largest industry.

Organized in 1991, the Governor's Agriculture Hall of Fame of Maryland honors farm families who exemplify high standards of achievement and commitment to community. A total of 19 families now make up the Hall of Fame, which is housed at the Maryland Department of Agriculture in Annapolis.

Option Now Available On Four Claas Balers

COLUMBUS, Ind. — Claas of America offers its popular Roto Cut™ option on a wide variety of balers.

The Roto Cut™ system, a crop slicing system that preprocesses crops for feeding or bedding, is available on the new Claas Quadrant 2200 large square baler, the Quadrant 1150 mid-size square baler, the new Rollant 250 round baler, and the Variant 180 Variable chamber round baler. The system increases bale density, enables bales to be fed more easily, and improves overall productivity.

The Roto Cut™ System features a heavy-duty helical rotor which feeds the material evenly through a series of stationary knives. Each knife is spring-loaded to prevent damage caused by foreign material. The system can be engaged or disengaged with the simple flip of a switch on the control box located within the cab.

New TM Tractors Available

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.)–Five new TM models in the 90-140 PTO hp segment replace New Holland's Gemini™ 60 Series tractors. The new TM tractors feature versatile performance, dependable power and smooth, comfortable operation. Plus TM tractors have a number of new design features which provide unmatched performance in this size range.

"Industry statistics tell us more tractors are purchased in this mid-range category than in any other," said Barry Newton, commercial marketing manager for TM tractors. "Row crop farmers use these tractors as utility tractors, while livestock and hay producers often use them as their primary tractor. Their broad appeal is one reason TM tractors are designed with so many new features and options to meet the application requirements of many different types of farming operations."

The five models of TM tractors range from 92 PTO hp to 135 PTO hp and are powered by a six-cylinder, 7.5L Genesis™ engine. All are turbocharged, except the TM115, which has been specifically designed to work with a loader.

Maximum torque reserve of up to 48 percent boosts lugging and on-road transport performance.

Three transmission options are available: 18 x 6 Power Command™, 18 x 6 Range Command™, and 23 x 12 Dual Command™. All transmissions are available with creeper gearing.

To deliver power to the ground, the TM offers a new, Power Command™ full 18 x 6 powershift transmission on the TM 150 and 165. This tranmission utilizes a patented torque-sensing system on the tractor flywheel that allows for fully "adaptive" shifting. The speed of each gear change is adapted according to engine load, engine speed and ground speed for smooth gear changes under all conditions through all 18 gears.

New creeper gearing provides a wide range of gears and a lower speed for more versatility.

Scraper Attachment Features Powerful Disk

FARGO, N.D.–Bobcat Ingersoll-Rand introduced the new Bobcat® Super Scraper skid-steer loader attachment.

The unique, tough-duty tool uses a horizontal, rotating disk to more easily remove ice, compacted snow, mud, commercial tile, and other materials.

Construction contractors and maintenance personnel traditionally use scrapers, blades or buckets for material removal, a process that is makeshift, time-consuming and laborious. With the Super Scraper, a skid-steer loader operator simply lowers the edge of the disk flat to the ground and then drives forward to quickly peel away material.

The Super Scraper attachment mounts quickly to Bobcat skid-steer loaders and can be easily maneuvered to desired project locations–providing quick turnaround time. Cleanup can then be completed with a bucket. The self-sharpening disk is 22 inches in diameter and has an operating weight of 172 pounds. The Super Scraper is designed for Bobcat 553, 751, 753, 763, 773, 863 and 873 skid-steer loaders.

MicroBio Introduces Double-Strength Rhizobial Inoculant

BOULDER, Colo.–HiStick 2, a new, high-powered soybean inoculant with twice the amount of viable rhizobial cells compared to many other inoculants, is being introduced in selected ares in 2000, according to MicroBio Ltd., the manufacturer.

"New HiStick 2 contains four billion live rhizobial cells per gram of product," said Aileen Lonergan, marketing manager for MicroBio. "Most conventional soybean inoculants, including MicroBio's popular HiStick, have two billion live bacteria per gram.

"With HiStick 2, we've doubled the rhizobial count so that growers can take advantage of the higher performance potential with this unique new product," she said. "The higher performance can result in increased yield potential from greater root nodulation potential. Recent tests conducted at Ohio State University and the University of Guelph have shown that a planter-box application of HiStick 2 resulted in significantly higher yields than the standard inoculant treatment and the untreated check plot."

HiStick 2 is manufactured with an "enhanced vigor" strain of Bradyrhizobium japonicum, a USDA soybean strain. It is packed in a sterile, peat-based protective carrier. The carrier is sterilized to prevent contaminants that could reduce numbers of rhizobia. HiStick 2 also has a patented sticker system for uniform distribution on seed in the planter box. In addition, the unique new inoculant has a seed treatment safener that protects it from most soybean seed treatments

Another advantage of HiStick 2 is its convenience of use. "We have greatly reduced the on-seed application rate of the inoculant to the absolute minimum," said Piran Cargeeg, MicroBio's technical development manager. "At the recommended application rate, all soybean seeds are efficiently covered with the inoculant, and at the same time eliminating any seed-flow problems (e.g., bridging) too often seen with other high volume peat based inoculants. Reducing the application rate any further leads to physical coverage problems, reducing the yield benefits and consistency of the inoculant. HiStick 2 has the lowest application rate (1.68 ounces per bushel) of any dry inoculant on the market. Basically, you get double the numbers for about half the rate."

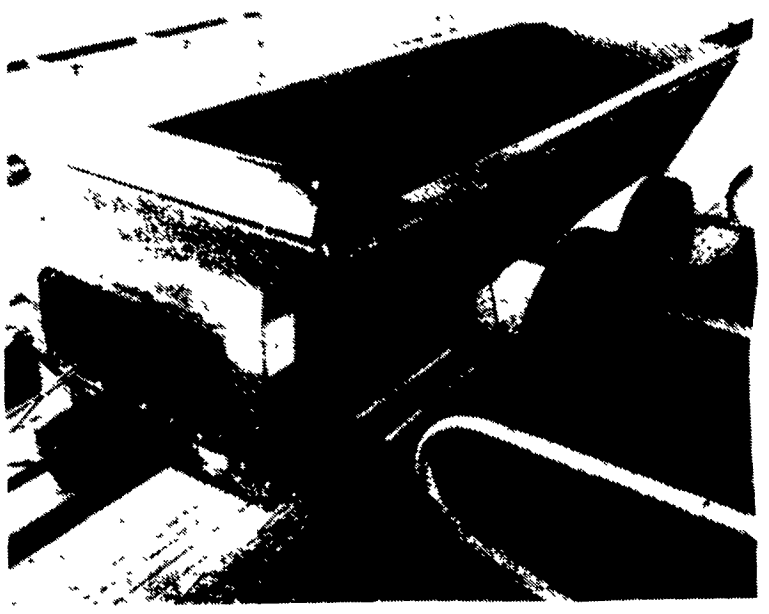
For growers, this adds up to convenience, potency, and performance in one easy step. Just pour the recommended amount on seed in the planter box, stir, and you are ready to plant. HiStick 2 works well in all planters, including air seeders You can use an EnviroPac inoculator to speed things up if you are using a bulk system.

The new inoculant comes in two package sizes. The 14 ounce pack will treat ten 50-pound bags of seed, and the 56-ounce package will treat forty 50-pound units of seed, making it ideal for mini-bulk systems. HiStick 2 is a ready-to-use product that requires no thawing or mixing. It will not cause planter box "bridging."

Knight Introduces Spreader

BRODHEAD, Wis.–Knight Manufacturing Corporation introduces the Bedder Spreader, a retrofit attachment for any Knight Slinger spreader. It is an efficient and cost-effective way to bed freestalls and open drylots. Knight has taken the proven ProTwin Slinger manure spreader design and has made it a dual-purpose unit. This attachment controls the spread pattern from 3 feet to 50 feet to handle most any bedding application.

The Bedder Spreader handles a wide range of bedding material, including composed manure, sand, sawdust, woodchips, grain hulls, chopped straw and corn fodder, or any free-flowing material you choose. Bedder Spreader sizes range from 7 to 19 cubic yards.



Novartis Seeds Launches Grassroots Biotech Education Program

GOLDEN VALLEY, Minn.–Since Dr. James Watson and Dr. Francis Crick unlocked the secrets of the double-helix DNA strand in 1953, advances in biotechnology have delivered new sources of insulin, helped control the spread of rabies and reduced the amount pesticides used on America's cropland.

That's the message of a new biotech education program developed by Novartis Seeds.

The 20-minute presentation, called "A Short Course on Biotechnology," traces the evolution of plant breeding from Gregor Mendel's early cross-breeding experiments with garden peas in the 1860s to today's more precise methods aided by genetic-enhancement technology.

"In recent months, it has become clear that our industry faces a challenge to educate consumers about biotechnology issues," said Ed Shonsey, president and CEO of Novartis Seeds. "Those who oppose biotechnology use misleading statements and emotion to scare people. No more! We are challenging our employees, independent seed dealers, and the rest of agricultural community to join us in a grassroots efforts to combat misinformation. We want consumers to know the truth about biotechnology so they can make their own decision based on sound science, not emotional appeals and scare tactics."

The Novartis Seeds announcement comes on the heels of the U.S. Senate's recent adoption of a resolution designating January 2000 as National Biotechnology Month. Novartis' Shonsey hopes that throughout the month-long celebration, agricultural professionals will use the education program to talk with their friends, neighbors and community leaders about biotechnology.

"In the months to come, I hope that every Kiwanis Club, 4-H group, and Elks Lodge has the opportunity to learn about agricultural biotechnology directly from those involved in the industry," Shonsey said.

To make that vision reality, Novartis Seeds is offering the biotech presentation script and its accompanying Power Point visuals free to all interested agricultural professionals. The CD-ROM package also includes a version of the presentation accompanied by a professionally recorded soundtrack. To receive a copy of the CD-ROM, contact Novartis Seeds by calling (888) 989-4BIO, or download the presentation file from company's web site, www.nk.com.

Erosion Control Stalls: Threatens Food Production, Air, Water

ANKENY, Iowa–More than a decade of progress toward protecting the nation's soil resources has stalled, threatening the productivity of America's farms, the quality of its air and water resources, and the global climate, the Soil and Water Conservation Society (SWCS) warns.

"Public and private collaboration led to a 39 percent reduction in the amount of topsoil lost to erosion from 1982 to 1997. However, there has been almost no progress since 1995 in preventing an annual loss of more than 1.9 billion tons of topsoil," said Craig Cox, executive vice president of the SWCS.

"Soil is as vital as air and water. The sustainability of life on earth demands we regain the momentum to conserve and protect our soil resources," said Cox.

Marking the culmination of the 100-year anniversary of the National Cooperative Soil Survey (NCSS), a county-by-county scientific inventory of U.S. soils, Cox said the stalled progress in soil conservation is largely due to a slowdown in the adoption of conservation tillage by farmers and the rapidly escalating conversion of cropland, wetlands, and wooded acres to urban uses.

Conservation tillage practices covered 37 percent of all agricultural land in 1998, up from 26 percent in 1989. However, the growth in the number of acres protected by conservation tillage slowed from 2.3 percent per year during the period of 1989 to 1993, to 0.6 percent annually from 1993 to 1997, and to near zero in 1998.

Studies by the Natural Resources Conservation Service, an agency of the USDA show soils on approximately 112.2 million acres (30 percent of U.S. cropland) are vulnerable to water or wind erosion at a faster rate than they can be replenished. Gully erosion, urban sprawl, and salinization are also threatening the health of the nation's soil, air and water, Cox said.

"Soil is the ecstatic skin of the earth," said Cox. "It's a natural filter that cleans our water and air and neutralizes greenhouse gases. Erosion clogs that natural filter and at the same time reduces the soil's capacity to store water and prevent flooding. Every ounce of soil we lose through erosion makes it more difficult to protect the environment while feeding ourselves and a growing population.

"It takes centuries to create soil, yet each year we continue to degrade the health of our soil," said Cox. "The increased adoption of conservation practices is critical. Clearly, we must redouble our stewardship of this most valuable resource."

The SWCS is an international conservation organization that fosters the science and art of soil, water, and related natural resource management to achieve sustainability. With more than 10,000 professional and student members, the SWCS promotes and practices an ethic recognizing the interdependence of people and the environment.

For more information about the SWCS, contact the SWCS office at (515) 289-2331 or visit the SWCS Web site at www.swcs.org.

"This Mixer Improved My Herd's Health"
- Brandt Gibbs, Gibbs Quest Dairy

"This was the first mixer we bought. We got it from Lapp's Barn Equipment in November, 1998. And it's amazing. Just adding this one piece of equipment actually improved our herd health noticeably."

Gibbs Quest Dairy keeps 80 cows in a tie stall barn. They use this RotoMix 414 Forage Express once a day with 200 lbs. of dry hay per mix, 2.5 lbs. per cow. Herd average is 23,500.

Four Ways We Deliver More...

#1 More By-pass, More Milk
Toasted Beans offer the consistently higher by-pass protein cows need to make more milk.

#2 More Production per Protein Unit
Toasting provides consistently superior protein release from every bean, without the variations that can tie up amino acids

#3 More Rumen-Friendly Source
Toasting is gentle. Digestibility is improved and energy (oil) is retained inside the bean to minimize impact on rumen environment.

#4 More of the Taste Cows Love
Toasted is Tastier. Cows eat every bean.

More for your Money.

- Store your beans FREE when you toast them at Weaver's.
- We provide pickup and delivery service for your processed beans and corn.

'Industry, Farmer, Scientist — Working Together Toward A Sounder Grassland Program'

Beginning Grazier's School Focuses On Grass Selection, Herd Health

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

SYLVAN (Franklin Co.) — What's good for tall fescue can simply make cows sick, according to a leading grazier.

Burning down and removing the grasses from the rotationally grazed farm operated by the Glenn Moyer family has been "one of the hardest decisions I've made since I've worked with grazing systems in 13 years," he said.

Moyer, host for the Beginning Dairy Graziers School in mid-October at the farm owned by American Farmland Trust (AFT) at the foot of the Tuscarora Mountain near Sylvan, looked over the brown grasses destroyed by Roundup.

Speaking to a group of two dozen producers learning how to graze, Moyer shook his head, realizing that it was awkward to have to get rid of the fescues — hardy grasses that can withstand drought and recover quickly — but he believes they could be responsible for health problems at his dairy.

Fescue endophyte toxicity, and possible nitrate problems resulting from quick regrowth from rains following a drought emergency, could be responsible for a drop in milk production, respiratory problems, lameness, "fescue foot," and a "lots of symptoms of things," said Moyer.

Fescue can be tolerant of dry weather. At the more than 300-acre AFT farm, the fescues were the first to green up well when rains fell after the drought. The persistent plant has genetics that makes it hardy and vigorous, readily surviving cold winters and prolonged drought.

Fescues, dating back 30 years, can experience a green flush after a drought. But that flush can be accompanied by nitrate toxicity — leading to lots of problems in cows.

"What I found out about fescue is that almost everyone has a theory," said Moyer. But ridding the farm of fescue — which they are doing, gradually — is contrary to "the way I was trained and how I was taught to graze," he said. Replacing it is "uncharted territory."

In October, Bryan T. Petrucci, director of farms division for AFT, introduced the graziers who at-

The AFT farm uses a concrete feed pad measuring about 100 feet long by 22 feet wide, with an additional area measuring 65 feet by 12 feet, comprising a feed area for 108 cows with two feet of room per cow, Moyer noted. The pad can accommodate about 130 cows. Moyer hosted the Beginning Dairy Graziers School in mid-October at the farm. Photo by Andy Andrews

Cattle, Equipment Can Move Efficiently, Safely With Good Laneway Design

Late in the spring, about 70 people, including herd managers, graziers, and agri-industry experts, spoke at a grazing field dale and tour of Dale Bracken's stocker cattle farm near Indiana.

The field day, sponsored by Project Grass, the Indiana County Conservation District, and the Mabis Mekenna Foundation, focused on laneway design and maintenance. J.B. Harold, Project Grass coordinator, Allan Wood, Natural Resource Conservation Service (NRCS) state engineer, and Bill Stout, Pasture Lab, University Park, spoke about laneway construction cation Center.

If you have an interest in learning more about alternative markets for your livestock products in a grazing program, value-added markets, what new developments are there in forage harvesting equipment or manure management for grazing livestock, then you should plan to attend the conference at the Holiday Inn.

In addition to these topics, many more will be presented by a wide array of speakers. Keynote speaker will be Dave Forgey, grass-based seasonal dairyman from Logansport, Ind.

Dave Forgey will be discussing his experiences through eight years of grazing. He will also be presenting his farm's financial picture over those same eight years of grazing.

Forgey has gone from a conventional dairying situation to grazing and most recently to a seasonal herd with spring calving while utilizing grazing. He is an excellent speaker and will be providing the audience with the complete picture of his operation. In addition to Forgey, there will be several other farmers presenting their story on various grazing topics.

On Wednesday evening many informal discussions with many of the day's presenters will provide an opportunity to discuss your current concerns for your farm or the grazing industry.

As part of the conference there will be a trade show where company representatives will be on hand to showcase what is new with forages and grazing technologies. You will be able to learn about the newest varieties of fence energizer and even purchase it there at the trade show.

For registration information, contact any local cooperative extension office, NRCS office, or Lisa Crytser at (814) 865-2543.

❖ PRESIDENT'S CORNER ❖

Ed Rits
Natural Beef Producer
Honey Grove

Winter is usually a good time for reflection and for planning for the next year.

As we pore over our records to meet our tax obligations, we look for ways to reduce our expenses or increase our income next year.

Winter is also a good time to attend several educational meetings. Not only can you learn what industry, researchers, and public educators have to offer, but you have an opportunity to visit with other producers faced with similar challenges.

The upcoming Pennsylvania Grazing and Forage Conference, March 1–2 at Grantville, would give you that opportunity. Registration information is available elsewhere in Foraging Around.

As we have aged and our boys left the farm, it was necessary that we develop a system of farming that reduced the need for strenuous manual labor. Much of the information we obtained came from visiting a number of grazing farms and attending several forage conferences 10–12 years ago.

If I was to select the one conference that was the most useful to us, it would be the PFGC-sponsored forage conference in the mid-'90's that reported on a PFGC-sponsored re-search project on forage storage options on a Lehigh county farm.

At the time we were not very hap-py with our experiences with large round bales. As a result of the information provided by this research project, we have developed a storage and feeding program for our farm that we are very satisfied with.

This on-farm research project was only available because people be-came members of PFGC and a portion of their dues was used to develop information and disseminate to other producers, educators, and industry representatives. If you are not a member of PFGC, consider joining today. If you have a problem on your farm, perhaps a project could be developed. See your local county agent.

Every producer should be doing some type of on-farm research every year. We can't expect university and seed companies to do all our re-search for us. If you have an idea to solve a problem on your farm, try it out.

Attention graziers: If you are a grazier who plants annual forage crops, you may be interested in trying a bag of tetraploid annual ryegrass. I have a bag I will give you to try on your farm. Call me at (717) 734-3745 if interested. If more than one grazier is interested, a drawing will be held at the PFGC annual meeting on March 1.

As I write this last PFGC President's Corner column for Foraging Around, I am reminded that all things come to an end, but will continue with good planning. PFGC will continue under the able guidance of Ed Konkle, our current president-elect.

PFGC will celebrate 40 years of service this year. Activities will be announced soon.

Our Century Farm will have the opportunity to continue as a family-owned farm because of the planning our generation has undertaken.

If you would like more information on passing on the family farm, contact Marian Bowlan at FarmLink, your local county agent, or a competent revocable living trust lawyer.

tended from all over the country, including West Virginia, Indiana, Tennessee, New York, and states in the Northeast. Petrucci urged those who attended to "consider adapting a grazing-based system as an alternative to high-capital farming," he said at the start of the school.

AFT, based in Washington, D.C., owns the grazing-based dairy, bequeathed to the AFT in 1996 by the estate of Anthony and Anya Smith, Sylvan. The farm was a dairy years ago when it switched to primarily a hay-production operation. In late 1997, the farm brought in the "first animals on the farm in 30 years," Petrucci said.

The AFT farm uses a concrete feed pad measuring 100 feet long by 22 feet wide, with an additional area measuring 65 feet by 12 feet. The area can accommodate 108 cows with two feet of room per cow, Moyer noted. The pad can accommodate up to about 130 cows.

Manure from the pad is scraped into a concrete holding basin, measuring 40 feet long by 24 feet wide at eight foot deep, enough storage for about 60 days, Petrucci said. A pump removes the liquid manure, which is field-applied. Similar to New Zealand-type storage systems, a challenge is coming up with a way in the future to separate the solids.

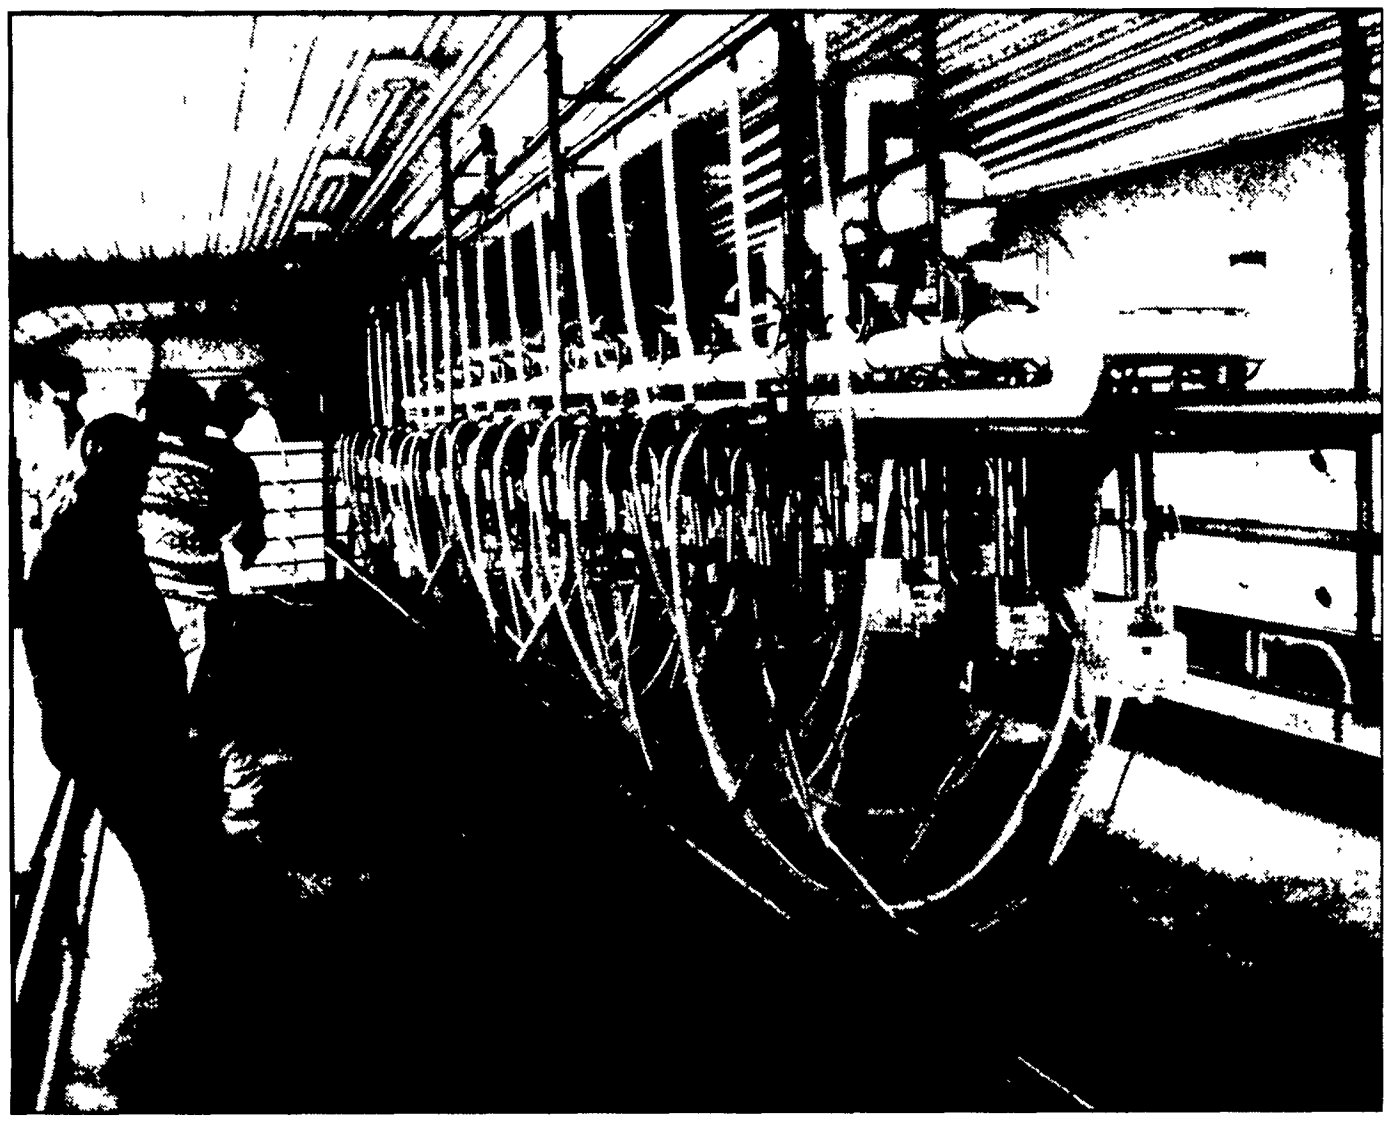
(Turn to Page 8)



Milk is moved to a 1,500-gallon tank. Moyer sells milk to the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative.

In October, Bryan T. Petrucci, director of farms division for AFT, center, introduced the graziers who attended from all over the country, including West Virginia, Indiana, Tennessee, New York, and states in the Northeast.

Thirty-two cows can be milked at a time, Moyer, right, noted. It takes about 50 minutes to milk 107 cows. The total cost of the Grade A sliding door parlor system, including the feed pad, manure management system, equipment, and parlor was $213,000, Moyer said.

This stream fencing system can be moved so cows can graze as near to the creek as the producer chooses. Moyer inspects the system.

The gate helps move cows into a swing, double-16, herringbone parlor, open on both sides. The sliding doors can be closed in the wintertime, where the floor is heated from a forced-water, oil-charged heating system.

Thirty-two cows can be milked at a time, Moyer noted. It takes about 50 minutes to milk 107 cows. The total cost of the Grade A sliding door parlor system — including the feed pad, manure management system, equipment, and parlor — was $213,000, Moyer noted. Some work was done by the Moyer family and employees. Construction began in August 1997 and the first cows arrived in the facility in March 1998.

Milk is moved to a 1,500-gallon tank. Moyer sells milk to the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative.

Moyer uses the facilities to ensure the cows stay clean.

"If you keep a clean cow, from start to finish, preparation is minimal," he said.

Also, with the sliding doors, the temperature can be about 10-15 degrees cooler inside than outside during the summer.

In the pasture area, an extensive drain tile system manages water flow. Surface water is tested regularly by the USDA-ARS. About 200 acres are in pasture. The rotationally grazed areas measure 5-10 acres apiece, subdivided into paddocks.

The pastures — composed of a variety of grasses including fescue, timothy, orchardgrass, reed canarygrass, and some clovers — are enclosed with 16-gauge high-tensile fence. The paddocks are divided by six-strand polywire supported by 5/8-inch fiberglass corner posts and 3/8-inch fiberglass spacers.

A crossing over the Little Cove Creek was constructed in April. The bridge is made of Virginia pine and maple at a cost of $25,000. The creek crossing is made of a geoweb plastic cell system, Petrucci noted. The system can be moved so cows can graze as near to the creek as the creek crossing is made of a geoweb plastic cell system, Petrucci noted. The system can be moved so cows can graze as near to the creek as the producer chooses.

Water is supplied to each paddock through 160 psi black water lines running on top of the ground.

Moyer is originally from Somerset County (which he claims have milder summers). Moyer, who has been operating the AFT farm since early 1997, has a 12-hour rotation on the paddocks.

"The key to rotational grazing is to give the cows fresh grass and to keep things as vegetative as possible," said Petrucci. At the summit, Petrucci noted that more legumes should be applied.

Bryan T. Petrucci, center, urged those who attended the grazing school to "consider adapting a grazing-based system as an alternative to high-capital farming," he said at the start of the school. From left is Kurt Achenbach, farm employee. At right is Glenn Moyer, farm operator.

Nate Leonard, grazing consultant from Pastures Unlimited, Little York, N.Y., said that he would "like to see about 30 percent clover in here with the orchardgrass," pointing to the benefits of ladino or white clover as an additive to the pastures, at the summit.

Leonard spoke about the benefits of frost seeding clover. In New York, frost-seeded clover took well but the state experienced a dry spring. Consequently, "not much took," he said.

Setting A Higher Standard

Each Pasture Pefect™ Mixture must contain at least 70% improved varieties. Improved varieties are defined as varieties in their species classification in the fields of palatability, feed value, digestibility, and/or yield. Varieties must have results proven by independent testing agencies.

Varieties must be suited to grazing. Pasture Perfect™ Mixes contain varieties that have proven to be well fit for grazing. Many mixes can be used for hay production as well, but this criterion ensures graze-ability.

Leonard, an agronomist, spoke about the importance of maintaining good soil organic material. He believes that producers can get a reasonable rate of gain off stocker cattle, even in drought, on pastures.

The seasonal dairy uses a sliding panel, open-sided milking parlor, demonstrated by Bryan T. Petrucci, right. The holding area uses a custom-made electrified crowd gate. The gate helps move cows into a swing, double-16, herringbone parlor, open on both sides. The sliding doors can be closed in the wintertime, where the floor is heated from a forced-water, oil- charged heating system. At left is Nate Leonard, grazing consultant.

He emphasized the importance of keeping grazing simple. Taking fescue out and reseeding with grasses suitable to the area, along with a legume mix, can prove viable.

The problems with getting a good forage can stem from lack of good fertility rather than grass species, he noted. He emphasized the importance of not following some kind of grazing "blueprint" but to take information and question it, and try to apply what you learn from other producers and technical sources.

Importantly, soil test and lime where appropriate.

Moyer manages a herd of mostly grade Holstein, Jerseys, and crossbreeds, he said. Rolling herd average, on a twice-a-day system on Lancaster DHIA, is 10,000-12,000 pounds. One high producer milks about 16,000-18,000 pounds per average, on a twice-a-day system on Lancaster DHIA, is 10,000-12,000 pounds. One high producer milks about 16,000-18,000 pounds per year.

Often, Moyer can judge the problems the cattle may be having from keeping an eye on them "and watching the bulk tank," he said.

Study Tells Which Perennial Grass Is Best For You

WOOSTER, Ohio— Perennial grasses provide both early and late-season grazing opportunities. The "1998 Ohio Forage Performance Trials" publication will help you determine which variety is best for you and your herd.

Perennial grasses such as bromegrass, orchardgrass, timothy, tall fescue, and reed canary grass are great for grazing as well as hay. These grasses have important characteristics that vary among each species.

Ed Vollborn, grazing leader in the South District of Ohio State University Extension, said the most important items measured were yield, quality, and persistence.

"For example," Vollborn said, "The contributing factors for measuring persistence are winter hardiness, disease resistance, and drought tolerance.The key factor for quality measurement is maturity."

Vollborn said tall fescue stands up well in high-traffic areas. "Timothy, often used for hay, can only be grazed when sod is firm. orchardgrass would not be the best choice for drainage ditches and waterways because it's a bunch-type grass and doesn't form a sod. Instead, it forms clumps that are interspersed with bare soil."

Orchardgrass is a versatile, perennial bunch-type grass that establishes rapidly. It's suitable for hay, silage, or pasture. "Orchardgrass is the most productive cool-season grass grown in Ohio—especially when it's fertilized regularly." Vollborn said.

It has rapid regrowth capabilities, produces well under intensive cutting or grazing, and obtains more summer growth than most cool-season grasses. It expresses limited growth under drought conditions.

Orchardgrass is especially well-suited for mixtures with tall legumes such as alfalfa and red clover. As hay, very early maturing varieties of orchardgrass are not well-suited for mixtures with these legumes. One of the limitations of this species is the rapid decline in palatability and quality with maturity. Early maturing varieties generally produce more forage for grazing and stockpiling. Orchardgrass varieties at the Jackson Branch of Ohio State's Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center have held up from a quality standpoint into February the last two winters.

Tall fescue is a versatile and persistent perennial forage, Vollborn said. Fescue has many uses, including erosion control, reclamation, and turf. Tall fescue can tolerate somewhat poorly drained soils and low pH situations. It grows and establishes on medium fertility soils and is somewhat resistant to drought. It's the most desirable grass to stockpile for late autumn and winter grazing. Tall fescue varieties also provide adequate forage quality for beef cattle and sheep during the autumn and early winter. Tall fescue is also tolerant of heavy grazing traffic.

"During winter months, higher yields of quality stockpiled fescue are obtained when compared with other species of cool season grasses," Vollborn said.

"New varieties of endophyte-free- and low-endophyte tall fescue have the potential to increase animal performance during the summer grazing season," said Chris Penrose, agriculture and natural resources extension agent in Athens County.

Endophyte-free fescue varieties are free from the fungus Acremonium coenophialum, which causes elevated body temperatures in animals. The toxins can cause blood restriction to cattle extremities.

Timothy is a hardy perennial bunch grass that grows best in cool and moist climates. it produces most of its annual yield in the first cutting. Summer regrowth is usually limited because of its intolerance for hot and dry conditions. Timothy is primarily used as hay and is especially popular for horses. It's less competitive with legumes than most other cool-season grasses and it's adversely affected by frequent cutting. A study currently taking place at OARDC's Southern Branch is looking at higher than traditional seeding rates for timothy.

Reed canarygrass is a high-yielding perennial grass tolerant to many soil and climatic conditions. it can be used for hay, silage and pasture, but has a reputation of poor palatability and low quality. Vollborn said this is because older varieties of the grass contained high levels of alkaloids—chemical compounds which reduced palatability. New varieties of reed canarygrass are available and offer improved quality and palatability. They can also be used for feeding lactating dairy cows. Only new low-alkaloid varieties are recommended if the crop is to be used for animal feed. These varieties are Palaton, Venture, and Rival.

Reed canarygrass is winter hard, drought tolerant, and resistant to leaf diseases. It's a persistent grass that responds well to high fertility and tolerates spring flooding, low pH, and frequent cutting or grazing. It also forms a dense sod.

Traditional thinking would say that limitations include slow establishment. Forage quality and palatability are thought to decline rapidly after heading. Current studies are proving otherwise, however.

Vollborn and colleagues from extension, the OARDC, and Ohio State University have studied key characteristics of these important grass species commonly grown in Spreaders are the most accurate broadcast spreaders in the world. The unique pendulum action keeps the spread pattern close to the rear of the machine while at the same time providing a symmetrical pattern on both sides.

The pattern allows "back and forth" as well as "around and around" operation. The "truncated" pattern offsets inaccurate overlap problems, eliminating streaking.

Rust free polyester hoppers, "DURA-COAT" enamel on painted components with stainless steel metering plates, precision adjustments, and a variety of spouts for a multitude of applications have earned Vicon Superflow seeder spreaders a world-wide reputation as the premier broadcast spreader.

Versatile Vicon spreaders band material in vineyards, orchards and nurseries, as well as spread lime, and salt and sand for winter use.

Economics of Baled Silage

In more than 20 different trials conducted over a five-year period, round bale silage (when properly done) results in storage losses consistently below 5 percent of the initial crop yield. This compares with typical losses of 25 percent for round hay bales stored outside, on the ground without covers.

The baled silage system costs about $5 per bale ($3 for plastic and $2 for machinery). Producers that typically bale less than 300 bales per year should consider custom hiring the bales made because that number of bales does not offset the initial cost of the wrapping machine. Custom wrapping rates vary from $6 to $8 per bale including the plastic.

Another big consideration with baled silage is the higher quality compared with baled hay. Alfalfa baled and wrapped at 50 percent moisture and 22 percent crude protein. However, alfalfa left in the same field until it was baled at 18 percent moisture had only 18 percent crude protein. The difference in quality was attributed to leaf loss with longer field curing.

Another benefit of baled silage is the very short wilt time which means harvesting can be done without as much concern for rain and closer to the optimum maturity stage for the type of livestock being fed. With hay, producers frequently wait one to two weeks after optimum maturity stage in the spring trying to avoid rainy conditions.

These findings assume that baled silage has been made correctly. Here are the four biggest factors ensuring success:

•Bales need to be wrapped the same day they are baled.

Univ. of Kentucky

Forage Variety Trials Report Available

The 1999 Penn State "Forage Variety Trials Report" is now available, for free, at your county extension office. This year's report contains variety performance information on alfalfa, red clover, and many cool-season grass species. If you will be seeding forages during the next year, this report will be a valuable asset in your species/variety selection process.

Forages Help Keep Cows Healthy

The principle consequence of having lactating cow rations that are high in grain and low in fiber (forages) is chronic acidosis.

Symptoms of Rumen Acidosis

•Variable but reduced dry matter intake.

•Milk fat depression.

•Laminitis (hemorrhage in the foot, sole abscesses, overgrown hooves).

Tips for avoiding Rumen Acidosis

•Build the ration from the forages upward. The healthiest rumen comes from meeting as much as possible of the nutrient needs of high producing cows from forage.

•Increase the chop length of forages incorporated into the TMR as much as possible.

•When feeding a TMR, do not feed hay separately if it can be avoided. You can not depend on all cows getting sufficient fiber if you feed it separately.

•If feeding grain separately from forages, feed the forage first.

•Steam up cows moderately before calving to adapt rumen microbes.

Others Want To Know!

Other forage producers want to know what you've tried or done to improve forage production or utilization on your farm. If it worked, great! But if it didn't work, others need to know that too! Do you have any new products or management practices that you want to share with your fellow Pennsylvania forage growers?

Forage And Grassland Council Turns 40

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — In 1960, the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council (PFGC) was formed by farmers, industry, and scientists who wanted to develop sounder forage programs for Pennsylvania farmers. Forty years later the PFGC has made tremendous strides in achieving that goal.

This year the PFGC will be highlighting some of Pennsylvania's forage history and the PFGC's involvement in many changes in forage agriculture.

Why should we care about forage production and use? Much of the land in the United States is ideally suited for forage production. In fact, more than 50 percent (1.2 billion acres) of the land area in the U.S. produces forages and nearly 60 percent of all livestock feed in the U.S. is forage. When considering only beef cattle, approximately 80 percent of the feed is forage.

Forages are generally perennial, so annual reseeding costs are not required. They provide excellent soil erosion control and require less chemical inputs (pesticides and fertilizers) than do grain crops. In addition, forage crops can generally be grown on soils that are unsuitable for grain crop production. These characteristics make forages a valuable resource for all (rural and urban) Pennsylvanians and Americans.

The backbone of Pennsylvania agriculture and the key to minimizing agriculture's impact on the environment is forage. That is why the PFGC formed and why they have spent 40 years working as a team of farmers, industry, and scientists trying to develop sounder forage programs for Pennsylvania.

To recognize this proud 40-year history, the PFGC is planning a 40th Anniversary celebration on Wednesday, Aug. 16 at Evergreen Farms covered bridge near Seven Stars. Mark that date on your calendar and make plans to attend.

For more information about programs, including the 40th Anniversary celebration, contact Richard Hann at (717) 520-2349.

PFGC Award Program 1999 Winners

PFGC Special Award

The Special Award is the highest recognition given by PFGC. It is presented to an individual or company that has made a major contribution directly to the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council as well as an outstanding contribution to Pennsylvania's forage and livestock industry and/or conservation farming. The recipients' contribution may have been in production agriculture, industry, research, extension, teaching, or other public service.

New Holland, North America located in New Holland, Pa., is this year's recipient of the PFGC Special Award. New Holland has been a strong supporting member since the PFGC was formed in 1960. They have provided the PFGC with two presidents in Albert Best (1979) and Mike Bular (1988) and numerous board members throughout the PFGC's 40-year history. In addition, New Holland was a financial supporter of the 1994 AFGC Conference held in Lancaster and the "PFGC 40-Year History," which is being written.

New Holland has also been an active participant in every PFGC Forage Field Day. Considering the many contributions of New Holland to the PFGC, both past and present, it is an honor to recognize them as the recipients of the PFGC Special Award.

Research/Extension/ Teaching Award

This year's Research/Extension/Teaching Award recipient is Penn Jersey Extension Partnership.

The Penn Jersey Extension Partnership is an educational union between Penn State Cooperative Extension and Rutgers Cooperative Extension. The partnership recently completed 16 years of successful interstate cooperation in agricultural programming, with it's mission being to provide enhanced and expanded educational programs that have demonstrable positive impact on agriculture in Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Many programming initiatives, including multiyear and multidiscipline educational programs, were undertaken to address producer needs. Some of the most successful Partnership events include pasture walks, pasture weed control demonstrations, a poisonous plant ID course, drought management newsletters, the Penn Jersey Tillage Conference, the Penn Jersey Dairy Expo, and hay quality evaluation workshops, just to name a few. Participants reported that the programs were valuable to them and they had applied management tools learned through the programs which makes Penn Jersey Extension Partnership truly deserving of this year's PFGC Research/Extension/Teaching Award.

Conservation Award

This year's Conservation Award recipient is J.B. Harrold, Project Grass coordinator of the Somerset Conservation District.

As coordinator for Project Grass, JB Harrold is instrumental in the establishment of rotational grazing systems in western Pennsylvania. JB oversaw the original grant that provided cost-share funds to the Project Grass counties.

Numerous grazing systems have been established under this program, with JB Harrold developing grazing management plans, providing suggestions on grazing practices, gathering data from the established systems, and preparing reports that describe the economic, nutrient management, and air pollution control benefits of using rotational grazing systems. He is now involved in a research project to determine if fly ash can be used to construct stabilized areas associated with pastures. Nearby counties have seen the advantages of being a member of Project Grass since JB Harrold was hired. As a result, the number of member counties is growing, as is the range of impact JB Harrold is making on grazing management in Pennsylvania.

J.B. Harold was recently assigned 12 more counties, which makes him in charge of all the western Pennsylvania counties. When we asked J.B. what he thought of this expansion, he just said, "More research!" We believe J.B. Harold has gone way beyond the call of duty and deserves to be recognized with the PFGC Conservation Award for 1999.

Conservation Farmer Award

Dale Bracken has established a rotational grazing system for beef feeders at one of his farms.

Working with the Indiana County Conservation District and the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service, Bracken expanded his rotational grazing system to include 16 paddocks that cover approximately 44 acres. High-tensile perimeter fence was installed, as were two stabilized stream crossings and a spring development.

Bracken's concern about the damage beef cattle were causing to feeding areas during the winter led to his developing a feeding area stabilized with stone. A water diversion was installed above this feeding area to channel runoff around the site.

A buffer area was established between the feeding area and a stream. Limited grazing buffer areas were established along both sides of the entire length of the stream in the pasture. Dale had a nutrient management plan developed for this grazing system and submitted the plan for approval under the Nutrient Management Act. Bracken hosted a tour of his farm and the grazing system for Project Grass. His efforts in teaching others about conservation by example and implementing the many conservation practices on his farm makes him deserving of the PFGC's Conservation Farmer Award.

Outstanding Pasture Producer Award

• Don Bothell, Indiana County. Bothell has worked with the Indiana County Conservation District and the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service to establish a rotational grazing system for dairy heifers and beef feeders. Forty-one acres are included in the pasture system, and additional cropland is used for grazing in the fall after crops are harvested. High-tensile perimeter fence (9,590 feet) and 8,900 feet of interior fence have been installed in the system. Two stabilized stream crossings have been installed to allow animals access to drinking water and pasture areas. Stream bank buffers have been established with the installation of stream bank fencing. Don Bothell has worked with the Indiana County Conservation District to conduct a pasture management field day at his farm. This field day allowed others to see how the system worked and to ask Bothell about pasture management. He also allowed the conservation district to conduct an agricultural conservation practice tour for legislators at his farm. Bothell participated by leading the group on the tour and explaining his pasture system operation.

• Glenn and Robin Gorrell, Milan, Bradford County. The Gorrells milk 185 Holsteins on 195 acres of pasture near Milan in Bradford County. They strive to provide all roughages from the pasture during the grazing season by timely use of nitrogen and reseeding of pastures. Glenn was the initiating force behind the Bradford County Grazing Network and continues to facilitate the 11 or so meetings they conduct during the grazing season. He has served as a speaker at several local, regional, and statewide grazing/forage related events.

PASTURE PONDERINGS

DUANE E. PYSHER
Grassland Management Specialist
Natural Resources Conservation Service
Harrisburg

I recently attended the annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Grazing Lands/Forages Conservation Coalition (GL/FCC) in State College.

Also in attendance was an old friend of grazing, Joe Vogel. Joe is a sheep farmer located at Kempton, and is doing a great job with grazing in his program. Joe is involved not only locally with grazing but also at the state level.

As the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau delegate to the board, Joe serves as vice chairman for communications, in charge of publicity and letter writing.

Joe and I were discussing business matters of the GL/FCC and it dawned on us that perhaps not very many people around Pennsylvania were aware of this organization or its functions. I called Joe the other day and interviewed him in order to explain the purposes and functions of the Pennsylvania GL/FCC.

Q: What is the GL/FCC?

Joe: It is an active coalition of producer organizations who have an interest in grazing and forages in Pennsylvania. There is a board of 15 members representing Pennsylvania livestock producer organizations. The GL/FCC is newly formed (one year ago) from the former Grazing Lands Conservation Initiative (GLCI) coordinating committee with expanded membership. The GLCI consisted of producers representing Pennsylvania livestock interests but was not functioning as a true coalition in which the board members were appointed by organizations.

Q: How does the coalition function?

Joe: The coalition, because it is made up of board members from different organizations, unifies the grazing efforts of all the organizations represented. If one of the parent organizations wants to sponsor an educational program on grazing then, because of the coalition, all livestock producer organizations are helping to carry out the program The GL/FCC is sponsoring and co-sponsoring many different educational meetings on grazing as a way of promoting the grazing movement in Pennsylvania.

Q: What producer organizations make up the coalition?

Joe: There are 15 different organizations in the coalition. They include Capital Area RC&D. Endless Mountains RC&D, Mid-State RC&D, Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts. Pennsylvania Cattleman's Association, Pennsylvania Dairy Association, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, Pennsylvania State Grange, Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council, Pennsylvania Holstein Association, Pennsylvania Livestock Association, Pennsylvania National Farmers Organization, Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association, and Penn Soil RC&D as well as members at large. This is a wide array of producer organizations; however, when they all have grazing as an interest, it provides a common focus for all organizations and makes the coalition much stronger.

Q: Is the membership of the coalition set so only those organizations listed can participate?

Joe: While the bylaws list producers organizations as members, there is nothing that prohibits an organization from being an associate member. As far as that goes, the bylaws could even be changed to include new organizations. There are also member-at-large positions in the coalition.

Q: How often does the GL/FCC meet?

Joe: We are holding meetings quarterly. Meeting dates are not predetermined, but decided on prior to the adjournment of a meeting.

Q: What types of activities has the GL/FCC been conducting?

Joe: In 1999, we held several field days such as the one that was co-sponsored by the Pennsylvania Cattleman's Association, Penn State Extension, and the coalition at the Haller Farm at Penn State on July 31. We also sponsored a seminar for agricultural lenders where the loan officers could come and learn about the economic benefits of grazing. For 2000, we are planning to hold a similar session for lenders and we are broadening the audience to include agricultural financial planners and creditors. At our last meeting, a committee was appointed to develop a plan of work for 2000 that includes all the field days and seminars that will be sponsored.

Q: How would someone or an organization that was interested in participating contact the GL/FCC?

Joe: The GL/FCC has established an address of Suite 340, One Credit Union Place, Harrisburg, PA 17110-2993. Any correspondence can be directed to this address. In addition to an address, the coalition is looking into getting an e-mail address and eventually a telephone number where they can be reached.

Q: Would the GL/FCC be interested in co-sponsoring a grazing activity that another group was holding?

Joe: Yes we would be interested. If there is a group out there that is interested in working with the coalition, please use the address I just mentioned and let us know what it is that we could help with and someone will contact them.

Well, my thanks to Joe for his

BARENBRUG

Forages For Profit
GREAT IN GRASS

Making grass farmers and ranchers more profitable is our business. For ninety years BARENBRUG has excelled worldwide in plant breeding and seed production, constructing breeding stations and test plots throughout widely varied climatic zones. Our expertise will provide you with scientifically adapted forage grasses perfectly suited to any location.

Barenbrug forage grasses are bred to be more leafy and have less seed heads, (thus higher quality) than competitors varieties. Dutch bred BARENBRUG varieties go through a tough 5 year government testing program where they have to be better than other varieties before they can be sold.

The tests are for:
Yield — Persistence under grazing pressure — Disease resistance
Palatability — Winter hardiness — Digestibility (Quality)

Environmental Phosphorus Index Supports High-Yield Agronomy

NORCROSS, Ga.–High-yield cropping systems depend on productive soils. One of the most important resources for building productive soils is livestock manure. Many crop yields have been set on soils with a history of manure use. Manure contributes nutrients, builds soil organic matter, and improves soil tilth. If manure applications can be targeted to low-risk areas for erosion and runoff, these areas can become focal points for high-yield crop management.

Manure builds soil productivity. But it can also pollute air, water and the soil. Manure must be applied with careful management, and this has led to the development of increasingly sophisticated nutrient management plans.

Most nutrient management plans emphasize a balance between nutrient supply and crop removal. While a balance is ideal, it is not realistic for many situations. In regions where livestock production is concentrated, the farm land base is not sufficient. Traditionally, most manures have been applied at rates that supply more phosphorus than the crop removes. This has not harmed the crop, as soil phosphorus levels several times higher than optimal do not reduce yields. Also, soil chemical processes gradually make applied phosphorus less and less available. Continued additions of fresh soluble phosphorus contribute to the health of the crop.

The buildup of soil phosphorus is a risk for the environment in hydrologically active areas–that is, parts of the landscape where surface runoff or erosion are likely. The risk of phosphorus loss to surface water depends on both source and transport factors. Areas at risk are where high soil phosphorus or high application rates coincide with zones of active surface runoff or erosion.

An environmental phosphorus index ranks vulnerability to phosphorus loss. The index incorporates transport factors affecting runoff and erosion–such as slope gradient, slope length, and distance to watercourse–and source factors including soil test phosphorus and rate and method of application of manure and fertilizer phosphorus. The phosphorus index often identifies a critical area comprising 2 to 15 percent of a field from which 90 percent or more of the phosphorus loss occurs.

The phosphorus index targets the low-risk areas for manure application to build soil productivity. The soils in these areas safely absorb the applied phosphorus and benefit from the other constituents of the manure. These are the areas where efforts need to be targeted at improving crop performance by supplying optimal combinations of manure and fertilizer nutrients to raise potential crop yields.

The phosphorus index is not a finished product. The index is an approximation of risk rather than a model of process, but its current form can effectively direct limits on manure applications and nutrient budgets to hydrologically active zones. However, more scientific work is needed, both to validate its accuracy and to improve the estimation of its component source and transport factors.

Soil tests that identify sorption capacity should be an essential component of an environmental phosphorus index. Some soils can adsorb up to 17,000 pounds of P_2O_5 per acre. Some calcareous soils have a phosphorus retention ability with no practical limit. On the other hand, some soils do become saturated with phosphorus to the point where both surface runoff and subsurface drainage water carry off excessive amounts.

The phosphorus index is site-specific. Appropriate application of the phosphorus index may demand the most intensive site-specificity that modern precision agriculture technologies can provide.

Working with an environmental phosphorus index, you can use manures and fertilizers to build soil productivity, resulting in high-yield cropping systems compatible with water quality.

Nutrient Management Plans Expose Fertilization Opportunities

NORCROSS, Ga.–In recent years, there has been an increased emphasis on nutrient management plans to improve the matching of nutrient inputs with production potentials. With nutrient management plans, better recommendations can be developed for nutrient rates, sources, timings, and application methods to achieve farmer agronomic, economic, and environmental objectives.

All nutrient management plans should be based on soil tests. Too often though, they start and end with collecting a composite soil sample from each field on the farm and following the soil test recommendation. Soil test results and recommendations are excellent tools, but should only be a starting place in nutrient management planning. Soil test results can be made more powerful when combined with the following information:

- Farmer managerial skills.
- Achievable yield goals and the potential for yield improvements.
- Soil physical conditions which either enhance or limit crop response.
- All nutrient inputs.
- Crop nutrient uptake demand and harvest removals.
- Opportunities to build soil test levels to increase yields.
- Opportunities to minimize risks from drought, diseases, excessive moisture, and other crop stresses.
- Landlord/renter relationships.
- Environmentally sensitive areas.

Good yields will be critical to profitability this year, because of low crop prices. Producing high yields with low cost per unit of grain, fiber, meat, milk, or other commodity is the challenge, every year. Every farmer needs to capitalize on the seemingly rare years with favorable weather and good crop prices. A good nutrient management plan can ensure that opportunities are not lost. In years of low crop prices, past efforts to build soil tests to optimum agronomic levels will pay off in greater flexibility to adjust production budgets.

On farms where animal waste is a resource, experiences with nutrient management plans indicate that nutrient imbalances are not uncommon. The nitrogen, phosphorous, potassium ratio of animal wastes, and the disproportionate crop uptake and removal of these three nutrients often result in elevated phosphorus levels in some fields. Many of these same fields may benefit from potassium addition. With nutrient management plans, these fields, or sub-fields, can be better identified for management changes. Animal waste applications may be adjusted or redirected to other fields to better match plant nutrient requirements. Nitrogen and potassium rates can be planned to bring soil fertility levels in balance with plant demands.

Most soil testing labs offer recommendations that are based on the probability of response to lime or nutrient additions. Many also consider the requirements for building soil tests to research-supported optimum levels over a reasonable period of time. These different soil test recommendations are often labeled as "lab recommendation philosophies." In reality, every farmer should consider not just what might be beneficial this year, but also for the long term. This means that soil test "sufficiency," "build-and-maintenance," and "drawdown" approaches may be equally viable. Each of these approaches should be considered on every field on every farm and probably on sub-field units as well.

Nutrient management plans can be tailored to individual producer needs. With nutrient management plans, farmers can develop short-term and long-term strategies for each field to achieve: soil fertility goals, high yields, field-by-field environmental objectives, and maximized profit potential.

Pennsylvania Forage And Grassland Council Forms To Help Farmers

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — On November 22, 1960, the Pennsylvania Grassland Council, which later became the Forage and Grassland Council, was formed by a group of farmers, industry representatives, and educators with a single vision: "working together for better forage programs."

The Grassland Council's original statement of purpose has been modified with time but the content remains relatively unchanged: "collection, coordination, and dissemination of information on all phases of Pennsylvania grassland agriculture."

The Pennsylvania Grassland Council was the first such organization in the United States. Its formation served as a model for other states as 34 other councils in the U.S. and Canada have been formed.

So when you hear or read about a Forage and Grassland Council in a state other than Pennsylvania, you now know it all started here in the Keystone state 40 years ago.

From the Grassland Council's beginning is was clear that it was not the council's intent to displace or compete with other organizations, but rather to encourage collaboration of grassland activities within Pennsylvania. The council hosted regional and statewide con-

Need Forage? Check Out HayNet

In response to the drought and shortage of forages for Pennsylvania farmers, Penn State has started a world wide web site to help locate forages. Penn State HayNet provides people wishing to sell or buy hay a free list of potential sellers and buyers. This WWW site can be accessed through your county extension office or directly via www.cas.psu.edu/docs/cashome/drought.

Fall Harvesting Alfalfa After A Drought

Dry conditions this summer caused a shortage of forage throughout Pennsylvania and the eastern part of the U.S. Consequently, many producers who normally wouldn't consider a fall alfalfa harvest are rethinking the issue. Here are the basic things to consider when deciding to take a fall harvest or not.

Alfalfa harvest schedules which do not allow the alfalfa plant to flower once during the season, predisposes the plant to winter injury. However, in a drought year, alfalfa stores abnormal amounts of sugars in its crown and root. This generally improves its chances of surviving a fall harvest.

Older alfalfa stands are more likely to winter kill or suffer winter injury following a fall harvest than younger alfalfa stands.

Alfalfa varieties with moderate resistance to several diseases and sufficient winterhardiness have greater tolerance to stress from fall harvesting than less disease resistant or winterhardy varieties.

Adequate soil pH and fertility minimizes the risk of fall harvesting by allowing alfalfa plants to develop properly and be healthier.

Alfalfa on well-drained soils is less likely to suffer winter injury than alfalfa on poorly-drained soils.

Leaving six to eight inches of stubble when taking a fall harvest will reduce the risk of winter injury.

Preserving High Moisture Hay: Is it Economical?

The following conclusions about the economics of using preservatives to store high-moisture hay were recently presented at the American Society of Agricultural Engineers.

1. Hay treatments with normal effectiveness (similar to propionic acid) must be applied at a total cost of less than $7.26 per ton DM in order to provide economic return with limited use. When treating most or all hay, the cost must be less than $3.63 per ton DM. If this treatment is used only when it prevents rain damage to the crop (considering perfect knowledge of future weather), the cost can be as high as $21.79 per ton DM with a net economic gain.

2. Hay treatments with excellent effectiveness (losses in treated high-moisture hay are similar to dry hay storage losses) have a breakeven cost of $8.17 per ton DM when used on most hay and up to $13.62 per ton DM for limited use to reduce the probability of rain damage.

3. Hay treatments with ideal effectiveness (eliminates all storage loss) provide breakeven costs of $11 to $16 per ton DM when applied to all hay. When the treatment is used on less of the hay, the cost can be as high as $21 per ton DM and still result in a net economic gain.

4. The breakeven costs of a preservative of normal effectiveness cannot be greatly improved through realistic changes in management.

Fenceless Grazing

Research being conducted at Oregon State University involves the use of radio transmitters and receivers to control livestock movement and distribution. The concept of the transmitters and receivers is similar to a shock collar used for training dogs. The cattle wear a radio receiver ear tag that is the size of a small transistor radio. When an animal approaches an area it is not supposed to be in it receives an audio signal. The animals soon learn how to stay within the invisible boundaries and avoid receiving the audio signal.

To date, research indicates that this technology has substantial potential in discouraging livestock use of riparian areas. The electronic ear tags have been shown to effectively change grazing patterns. Research suggests that this technique does not adversely stress animals.

The future use of this technology is encouraging. Fenceless livestock control has significant advantages to exclusion fencing particularly related to other uses of public lands (i.e., recreation and wildlife, esthetics, etc.). The advent of global positioning technology and its potential use in technology such as electronic diversion may open up even greater potential in the near future.

Grazing Horses On Alfalfa

Sixteen yearling horses were grazed on alfalfa under two different grazing treatments. Eight horses were continually grazed on 5.2 acres and eight were grazed on a rotational system consisting of six paddocks of .9 acres each.

The horses were allowed 24-hour access to alfalfa throughout the trial, and they received no additional protein or energy supplementation. The continually grazed treatment lasted 25 days before the grazing pressure removed available forage. Those horses on the rotation treatment grazed a total of 37 days.

Forage yields revealed that the horses on rotation had access to more forage per acre due to yield variations in the field and to the systems design of restricting grazing to smaller sections of the grazing area. Visual observation revealed a higher incidence of spot grazing in the continually grazed treatment.

Animal gains at 25 days of grazing averaged .5 pounds per day for the continually grazed horses and 1.3 pounds per day for the rotationally grazed horses. No digestive disorders were detected in any of the horses. Results suggest that if managed correctly, moderate growth rate may be reached in yearling horses grazing alfalfa without additional supplementation. From visual observation, it is suggested that a controlled grazing system may be the most efficient method for forage utilization under the conditions of this trial.

Drought Doesn't Hurt PFGC Hay Show

The drought of 1999 certainly reduced the amount of hay that was made in Pennsylvania, but you wouldn't have known it by looking at the number and quality of samples entered in the PFGC Hay Show at Ag Progress Days. The 137 samples in this year's show was seven more than entered last year. Many people who entered hay in this year's show commented that they didn't have much hay but what they had was very good quality. They attributed the high quality to ideal weather conditions for hay curing.

People's perception that the quality of hay was very good was confirmed by the NIRS quality analyses of the samples. The hay quality was the best it has been in ten years. Averaged across all samples crude protein = 18.7 percent; acid detergent fiber (ADF) = 31 percent; neutral detergent fiber (NDF) = 50 percent; and relative feed value (calculated from ADF and NDF) = 125.

The champion in the "Field Cured" division was Brian Fulmer from Pen Argyl in Northampton county with an entry of later cutting alfalfa. The champion in the heat dried division was R.M. Klein Hay & Straw Farms from Northampton in Northampton county with an entry of pure alfalfa. Mark Pifer from Reynoldsville in Jefferson county was the champion in the "Preservatives Added" division with a later cutting of pure alfalfa.

The PFGC Needs Your Help!

Do you have an interest in helping develop some of the activities of PFGC? Do you have some good ideas you'd like to share with others about the future direction of PFGC? Would you like to assist in evaluating farms for selection of the Outstanding Pasture Producer Award? If you answered "yes" to any of the above questions, then the PFGC needs your help!

The standing committees of the PFGC (Awards, Publications, Picnic, Finance and Budget, Research & Education, Membership, Fall Conference, Constitution and By-Laws, and Legislative) need people who have ideas. These committees are made up of and chaired by volunteer members of the PFGC such as yourself. If you would like to be in on the planning of PFGC activities and direction, then give one of the committees a try!

If you're interested in serving on a committee, just call Ed Ritz at (717) 734-3745 or Marvin Hall at (814) 863-1019 to discuss where you can help.

Phosphorus, Potassium Improve Nitrogen-Use Efficiency

NORCROSS, Ga.–Balanced fertilization with phosphorus and potassium, to replace harvested nutrients and to build and sustain soil tests at optimum levels, is a proven best management practice.

Productivity is at risk in many farm fields across the U.S. and Canada. Recent soil testing summaries for North America indicate that in more than 60 percent of the states and provinces, 40 percent or more of the analyzed soil samples test medium or lower in phosphorus.

About 50 percent of the states and provinces report that 40 percent or more of the analyzed soil samples test medium or lower in soil test potassium. In several states and provinces, the percentage of samples testing medium or lower in both nutrients ranged as high as 70 to 80 percent. These soil test results indicate that phosphorus and potassium needs are not being met on many farms.

Phosphorus plays a critical role in photosynthesis, genetic coding, and energy transfer in all plants. Phosphorus, like potassium, is essential for nitrogen fixation in legumes. Top and root growth of virtually all crops is increased with balanced phosphorus and potassium nutrition. Corn research in Illinois and wheat research in Colorado, for example, have shown that response to nitrogen is reduced when phosphorus is deficient. Similar results have been reported for bromegrass in Kansas research. With adequate phosphorus, response to nitrogen is improved through increased nitrogen and phosphorus uptake, hastened maturity, increased nitrogen-use efficiency, and increased yields. These effects work together for increased profit potential, improved root growth with adequate phosphorus can also enhance the capture of soil and fertilizer nitrogen and can reduce the amount of residual nitrate-nitrogen, which may be prone to leaching or runoff losses. Adequate phosphorus increases crop yields and profit potential while minimizing the potential for environmental nitrogen loss.

Potassium plays a critical role in enzyme activation, water use, photosynthesis, transport of sugars, protein synthesis, and starch synthesis in plants. Potassium is especially important in its interaction with nitrogen throughout the growth cycle. If affects both nitrate absorption and reduction to amino acids and protein formation in plants. Adequate potassium in the field results in higher crop yields and higher nitrogen-use efficiency. Crops respond to higher potassium levels when nitrogen is sufficient, and greater yield response to nitrogen occurs when potassium is sufficient.

A balance between nitrogen and potassium results in greater uptake and less residual soil nitrogen that could potentially impact the environment. Ohio researchers reported that total plant nitrogen uptake was increased 75 percent by optimum potassium fertilization when using 160 pounds of nitrogen per acre. At 240 pounds of nitrogen per acre, optimum potassium fertilization raised nitrogen uptake by 48 percent over no potassium fertilization. Optimum potassium fertilization increased the nitrogen concentration in the grain as well as the total amount of the applied nitrogen removed in the grain. Optimum potassium fertilization enhanced nitrogen-use by the crop and reduced the residual soil nitrate, resulting in lower nitrate leaching loss.

With current crop prices and stiff global competition, crop advisers and good farm managers must continue to emphasize high yields to maximize the potential for profit. Balanced fertilization with phosphorus and potassium, according to soil tests, is necessary for sustained, profitable crop production. Fertilization with phosphorus and potassium replaces harvested plant nutrients, sustains yields, enhances water-use efficiency, and protects the environment by increasing nitrogen-use efficiency. Nutrient management plans for 1999 should emphasize adequate phosphorus and potassium for attaining and sustaining profitable crop yields, and to enhance nitrogen-use efficiency for protection of the environment.

Laneway

and stabilization.

Laneways, noted the experts, are the "arteries" of a grazing system. They are used to transport livestock and equipment to and from grazing paddocks.

For beef and sheep farms that aren't intensively managed, laneways may not be necessary. But on a dairy, laneways are heavily used and usually require some sort of stabilization — a way of keeping them erosion-free — to avoid creating muddy or compacted areas. Muddy conditions can be dangerous for cattle movement, contribute to hoof disease, and create other problems.

Harold and Stout outlined the following important considerations in laneway design:

• First, determine the number and type of livestock and the size of any farm or service equipment that will be using the laneway.

• Second, determine the width of the laneway. If the lane is to be used for livestock only, it can be as narrow as eight feet. However, if a watering tank or equipment is going to be used in the laneway, then the lane should be at least 12 feet wide. The laneway width should never exceed 20 feet.

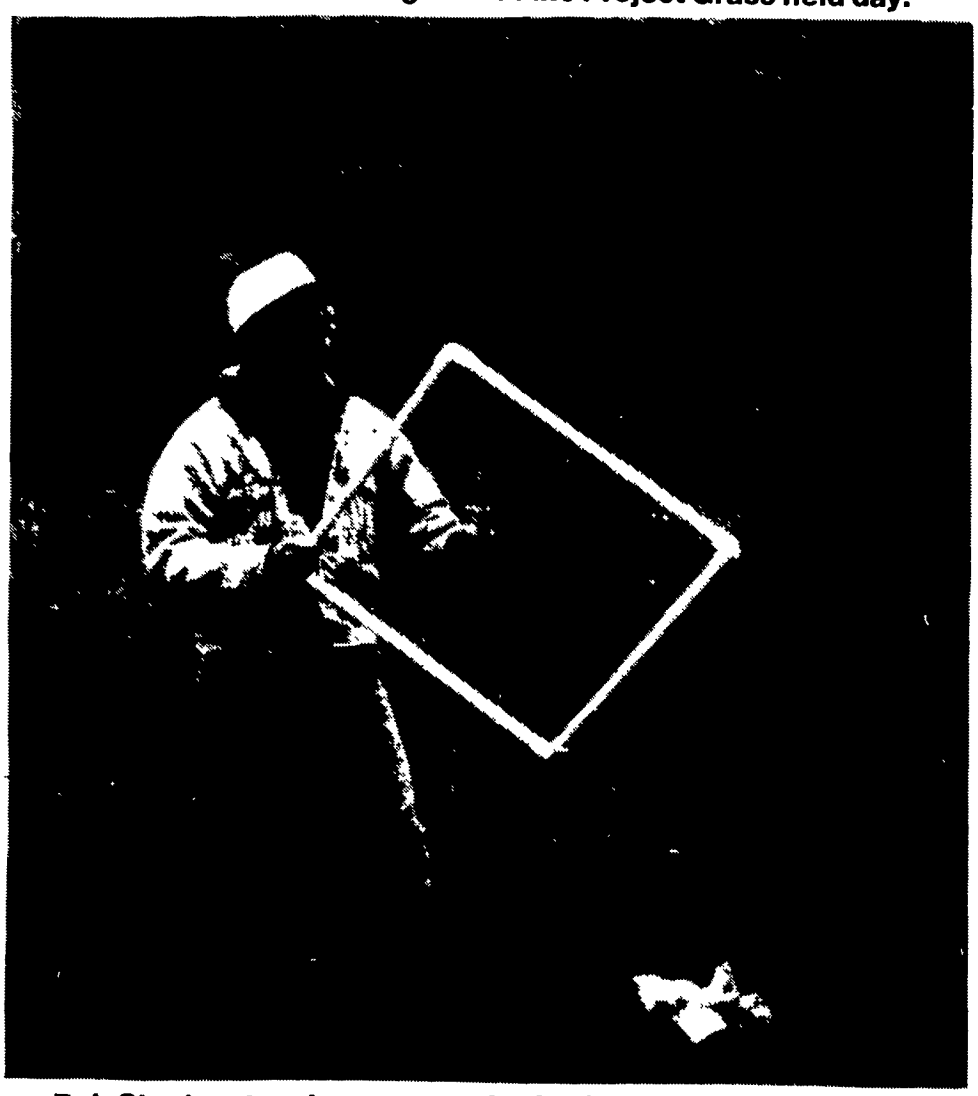
Dale Bracken, Indiana beef farmer, talks about laneway stabilization and stabilized feeding area at the Project Grass field day.



Rob Stout, extension agronomist for Armstrong, Westmoreland, and Indiana counties, demonstrates how to collect grass samples for testing at Project Grass field day.

• Third, Harold noted, keep livestock behavior and movement in mind when constructing the laneway for livestock. Do not design the laneway with sharp turns or with steep slopes. Design the laneways to provide fast, safe, and efficient movement for livestock and equipment.

For feeding livestock, take a forage sample. Rob Stout, extension agronomist for Armstrong, Indiana, and Westmoreland counties, showed how to use a forage probe when testing a round or square bale by inserting the probe into the side of the round bale and into the end of a square bale.

The agronomy agent also demonstrated how to use a square PVC pipe to rest pasture forage sampling. By tossing the square PVC pipe at random in a square acre area, where the piping lands is where you cut your fresh grass at the height of the frame for testing. Place the fresh cut grass into a bag and gently dry in a window with a fan directed on the bag. A certified private lab can then test the dried grass.

Dale Bracken, beef farm owner, near Indiana, and Lou Kopceyk, Indiana County Conservation District manager, spoke about Bracken's Project Grass grazing system.

Bracken finishes 50 feeder stocker cows through the system every year. "Bracken stocker cattle never see a barn," said Bracken. The cattle are out in the paddocks year-round. In the winter, Bracken uses a sacrifice paddock to keep the cattle in.

From early spring to late fall, Bracken cows graze 17 paddocks on 26 acres with a rate of gain of 1.8 pounds per day. Bracken uses six-wire high-tensile fence on the perimeter of his land and one- to two-strand wire to divide the paddocks.

Bracken said, "One of the problems of stocker cattle is that they are wild and hard to catch. With rotational grazing, the herd knows that in two days they will be moved to a fresh, green paddock for fresh food."

The relationship between the farmer and the cattle becomes friendlier with the opening and closing of each gate.

Bracken also showed the group two stream crossings he installed, alleyway stabilization, and a stabilized feeding area containing a filter region.

The keys to nutrient management were also outlined at the field day. Nick Pinizzotto, nutrient manager for Armstrong, Indiana, and Butler counties, explained that nutrient management involves controlling the amount, form, and timing of plant nutrient application. Nutrient management targets nutrients according to crop needs and amounts of available nutrients from all sources. Management prevents overfertilization, protects ground and surface water, and can reduce production costs and improve net income.

Record-keeping, according to Pinizzotto, is an important component of nutrient management. He suggested that farm managers consider the following management tips:

• Have soils tested by a certified private lab or land-grant institution to determine levels of phosphorous, potassium, pH, and organic matter.

• Nutrients can be surface-applied, injected, or banded.

• Test for nitrates during early corn growth. Test manure and organic wastes for nutrient content.

• When applying manure, avoid sensitive areas such as frozen soils, snow-covered soils, flood plains, and steep slopes.

• Test stored manure for nutrient content when there are feed program changes.

• Periodically calibrate and adjust equipment used to apply nutrients.

Successful Grazing Means Measuring Pasture Growth

WELLSBORO (Tioga Co.)–Successful graziers know there is more to grass-based dairy and beef operations than just turning the cows out each morning. Proper pasture management is critical, especially in drought conditions such as much of Pennsylvania has experienced this growing season.

"The key is keeping forage primed so it's ready to respond to moisture," said Tioga County Cooperative Extension Agent Craig Williams. "If you make it go dormant (through overgrazing), it won't respond to rain."

Pasture growth and the resulting fertility and nutrient availability are the focus of an ongoing study Williams and several other extension agents are conducting throughout the state. The idea was to take weekly grass growth measurements, plot the data on graphs, then use the information to study the complex relationships between feed and milk production, pasture rotation schedules and regrowth rates, and the amazing variability, even on adjacent paddocks, of these regrowth rates.

Craig Williams noted the importance of Alistair Pasture Gauge.

Using the Alistair Pasture Gauge, an instrument that calculates grass density, height, and pounds-per-dry matter, agents have the benefit of uniformity as they obtain measurements. Everyone agreed the "eyeball" is the best measure, Williams continues, but with seven different agents there was a need for a "common denominator."

In Tioga County, Williams used Russ and Karen Tomlinson's Kick-a-Moo Farm, an intensive, rotational grazing operation, as a study area. During a Pennsylvania Association for Sustainable Agriculture sponsored field day at the farm, Williams discussed the study process and, on the pasture walk, explained some of the differences in pasture fertility.

For example, green circles where several there had been round bales showed the cow manure and urine. The green "stripes" were the result of spreading "Hatgrow fertilizer" out of a barrel manure spreader.

Williams said, "The green stripes were not what we wanted, but now we will be able to watch the two areas of different fertility levels, together as the cattle graze across them."

Grazing in a drought year is challenging, he noted. A field that gets grazed all the time will simply shut down. The data gathered so far shows how fast grass will respond to even a little bit of water if it is in the right stage (of growth). Graziers must therefore be ready to adapt to changing conditions; at Kick-a-Moo Farm that means moving the cows about every 12 hours and keeping a close watch on pasture growth. Those practices, in conjunction with the sporadic, small amounts of rain which have fallen on Tioga County, have been enough to keep the Tomlinson pastures relatively green.

"Some areas of the state have received no rain, and the plants have just gone dormant," Williams said. "That's the struggle with grazing. Keeping track of how the grass is growing is the only way to keep on top of it. It really does make it a week to week management issue."

The pasture gauge is a good tool. A boot and a eye work also, but the most important thing is to measure growth, regardless of what tool is used, he said.

Daily Changes In Alfalfa Quality

Studies conducted in California indicate that both crude protein and acid detergent fiber in alfalfa are lower in the afternoon than early morning. However, total digestible nutrient levels were higher in the afternoon than morning. Further research is being conducted to determine if these daily changes in forage quality are detectable after baling and storage.

PRODUCTION AND PERSISTENCE OF TALL FESCUE, PERENNIAL RYEGRASS, AND PRAIRIE GRASS AFTER FALL GRAZING

M.H. Hall, P.J. Levan, E.H. Cash, H.H. Harpster, and S.L. Fales, Penn State Extension

As the costs associated with animal agriculture increase, so does the interest in grazing to lower feed cost. Inn Pennsylvania and other temperate environments, extending the grazing season into the fall or early winter further helps reduce animal production expenses relative to feeding hay or silage.

Tall fescue has traditionally been the grass species used for fall grazing and/or stockpiling (accumulating the standing forage during the growing season for use in late fall or winter). However, other grass species which have excellent fall growth attributes may also work well for fall grazing and/or stockpiling. Our objectives were to evaluate the seasonal and whole-year production of perennial ryegrass, prairie grass, and tall fescue under different fall grazing management schemes.

Study Description

In 1994, 1995 and 1996 three fall-grazing treatments consisting of: 1. Stockpiled; 2. Lax (grazing once in September and then not grazing again until spring); and 3) Intensive (continued grazing on approximately 30 d schedule through November) were imposed on established stands of 'Barcel' tall fescue, 'Citadel' perennial ryegrass, and 'Grasslands Matua' prairie grass at the Haller Livestock and Forage Research Center near State College, PA. Swards were grazed to a residual 2 in. stubble height by mature cross-bred (Dorset x Suffolk) ewes. Forage yield, persistence, and ewe grazing days were monitored throughout the study.

Applied Questions

• How did Citadel perennial ryegrass perform compared with tall fescue? Perennial ryegrass and tall fescue responded similarly within and across grazing treatments. Total season yield and persistence ryegrass were equal to tall fescue regardless of the fall grazing management.

• How did Grasslands Matua prairie grass perform compared with tall fescue? During the first year after implementing the grazing treatments, prairie grass had lower survival and lower total-season yield in Stockpiled compared with the other grazing treatments. By year two of the study, prairie grass had not survived in any of the grazing treatments. The frequent inability of Grasslands Matua prairie grass to survive Pennsylvania winters makes it an unsuitable grass in perennial pastures.

• Which grazing treatment produced the most forage each year? Continuing to graze on an approximate 30-d interval into the fall until the grasses stopped growing produced the most annual forage and consequently the most grazing days. However, unlike stockpiling, this grazing practice (Intensive) can not extend the grazing beyond November in Pennsylvania. In addition, spring growth of fall grazed and stockpiled grasses is less than when grasses are not harvested after September (Lax). Consequently, a combination of Lax, Intensive and Stockpiled grazing may be most desirable on farms in Pennsylvania and the Northeast.

Recommendations

Tall fescue and perennial ryegrass were similar in performance regardless of the fall grazing treatment. Grasslands Matua prairie grass did not survive in this and other studies in the northeast region. Therefore, varieties with improved winter survival must be available before farmers in northern climates consider prairie grass as a viable component in perennial pastures. Using a combination of Lax, Intensive, and Stockpile grazing may be most desirable. Intensive and Stockpile grazing would allow continued grazing into the fall and early winter, respectively, and Lax grazing would permit early spring grazing while the fall-grazed pastures recover.

SPECIAL REPORT

ALFALFA SUGARS

Dr. Marvin H. Hall, Penn State Forage Specialist

Recent farm magazines have reported research that shows alfalfa hay cut in the afternoon has higher sugar levels and greater palatability than morning cut hay. It is important to note, however, that this research was done in Idaho and may not apply to Pennsylvania conditions.

We know that there are daily fluctuations in plant sugar levels, with the highest levels occurring in the afternoon or evening on days when the alfalfa is actively growing. During the night, these sugars are moved from the leaves and stem into the root where they are stored until needed to support regrowth after cutting. Consequently, the lowest level of herbage sugars occurs just before sunrise.

So mowing in the afternoon captures the maximum amount of sugars in the leaves and stems. However, with the humid and warm nights we have in Pennsylvania, compared with the dry cool nights in Idaho, respiration continues to burn up the sugars throughout the night so that by morning we see very little difference between afternoon and morning mowed alfalfa. In addition, mowing in the afternoon adds an extra day to the drying time and increases the chance of rain on the hay.

The one time when afternoon mowing would possibly be beneficial in Pennsylvania would be if the alfalfa could be cut and harvested in the same day as haylage.

Feeding Cattle Hay Can Really Be A Waste

COLUMBUS, Ohio — If not managed properly, more than 60 percent of the hay fed to cattle could go to waste, said Steve Boyles, Ohio State University Extension beef specialist.

"Because of a cow's behavior, it may eat a certain amount of hay then lay on the rest, or stand on some hay while it's eating and then won't eat the soiled hay," Boyles said, "Using a bale feeder or some other method to restrict cattle's access to hay wouldn't allow them to stomp as much into the ground and could greatly reduce hay wastage."

Hay is the most widely grown mechanically harvested crop in the United States, with more than 150 million tons of hay harvested from 60 million acres of forage crops each year. Annual production is valued at more than $12 billion. But it's estimated that the total value of hay storage and feeding losses exceeds $3 billion annually. On some farms, losses can account for more than 10 percent of the cost of livestock production Boyles said.

"Some hay losses during feeding can be expected with any feeding system, but the amount of loss varies with methods of feeding," he said. "In research trials, feeding losses have ranged from less than 2 percent when great care is taken to more than 60 percent when no attempts were made to reduce loss."

The biggest waste during feeding occurs when producers allow livestock to have unlimited access to hay. Wastage can be 40 percent or more when cattle are allowed free access to large round bales without feed racks, Boyles said. When rings or feeders are used to restrict access to large bales, average hay wastage is lowered significantly to 9 percent. Only 7 percent of hay is lost when smaller square bales are fed in a rack.

Wastage is greater with low quality hay than with high quality hay for all feeding systems.

Limiting the amount of hay fed to a one-day supply also reduces losses. Boyles said. Cattle with free access waste 11 percent of hay when given a one-day supply of 20 pounds, 25 percent when given a two-day supply of 40 pounds, and 31 percent when given a four-day supply of 80 pounds.

"Intermittent feeding may be necessary to reduce labor, and time is money, so some producers may have to balance out how often they feed with how much hay they're willing to waste," he said. "If substantial quantities of hay must be put out at one time, putting a barrier between the hay and the cattle will reduce waste."

The barrier could be an electric wire, feeding racks or rings, panels, wagons, or gates. Feeding racks and rings are available in a variety of shapes and sizes, and blueprints of homemade bale protectors are available through Ohio State University Extension, Boyles said.

Altering hay bales before feeding, such as unrolling a bale to enable livestock to line up and eat like at a feed bunk, can reduce waste. But unrolling a bale and allowing free access still results in an average hay loss of 23 percent.

When feeding hay in a pasture at various locations, cattle waste less if they have solid footing. Dry, well-drained or frozen sites should be chosen when feeding hay outside, he said. More hay is trampled and uneaten when feeding at wet or muddy locations.

Feeding hay in only one area allows producers to select convenient feeding locations that are easily accessible and minimize the areas where sod is

Maryland Grazing Research Benefits Livestock Producers

KAREN BUTLER
Maryland Correspondent

KEEDYSVILLE, Md. — Research under way here at the Western Maryland Research and Education Center will benefit graziers and other forage-based agricultural producers in the Mid-Atlantic region.

A cooperative endeavor between two Maryland Cooperative Extension agents, the research project examines the performance of annual and perennial grasses under management-intensive grazing systems.

Don Schwartz, ag agent in Washington County, Maryland, and Stanley Fultz, dairy agent in Frederick County, have pooled their expertise and areas of interest to work together on the grass trials. They are trying to find a grass or a combination of grasses — not just limited to an annual and a perennial, but maybe a combination of both, that is more nutritious, durable, and maybe higher yielding — to fit into a system in this part of the country.

Many of the grass varieties are coming out of New Zealand and Europe, and they haven't been tested here under grazing conditions. So far most of the research on how the grasses perform has come from New Zealand and Oregon, according to Fultz, but what researchers know about how different grass varieties perform here has been limited.

Schwartz and Fultz are pioneering this kind of research here in the Mid-Atlantic region.

"All the forage work and grass variety work has been under a haying system, where they cut them four times a year," said Fultz. "Nobody on the East Coast is doing this kind of research."

The project at the research farm began in 1997 with annual ryegrass and has now been expanded to include four replications of each of 38 perennial and 18 annual varieties. The research will focus on three main areas: grass species performance, animal performance under a management-intensive grazing system, and the performance of the system as a whole, explained Schwartz.

To estimate the yields, paddocks are measured with a pasture gauge equipped with a small computer. The model the researchers are using is called an Alistair George Pasture Gauge. The tip of the instrument that touches the ground has a small metal probe that sends out an electrical signal that measures the density and height of that stand of grass. This information is then plugged into an equation that calculates the available dry matter per acre of the stand. Gauges are available that range from very sophisticated computerized versions to lower cost manual systems, said Fultz.

Animals from the Central Maryland Research and Education Center in Clarksville, Md., are trailered in for grazing trials to monitor their growth and performance. Although dairy heifers are used, both agents say they work with a variety of livestock producers who are grazing their animals and can benefit from the research.

The bred Holstein heifers come in at an average weight of 1,112 pounds. They are monitored for weight and body condition score.

There is a five-acre piece to be mechanically harvested and a five-acre piece to be grazed. The perimeter fence used is a Natural Resource and Conservation Service-designed, 5-strand, high-tensile wire system. The grazed acres are divided into 5 one-acre paddocks and then further cross-fenced with one strand of polywire into half-acre paddocks to get better grass utilization. Stocking rates are 20 animals per half-acre per day.

The mechanical harvest of the forage is done in such a way that it mimics ideal grazing conditions. Each variety is harvested individually when it reaches a height of 6-8 inches and mowed to a 2-inch stubble height.

A well-attended pasture walk conducted at the research farm last fall gave farmers the opportunity to see firsthand how the research is structured. No data will be released for several years because the researchers want to look at what the grasses will do from year to year, under a variety of conditions, in an effort to benefit the producers.

In the meantime, producers can keep up to date on the project through pasture walks conducted by the extension service, and also through a fact sheet to be published.

Feeding Cattle Hay

trampled. However, excessive pasture destruction and muddy conditions in the feeding area could occur. If choosing one area, feeding on concrete or large gravel provides a solid foundation. Geotextile fabric and Flue Gas Desulfurization (FGD) coal-burning byproduct are new low-cost alternatives for creating solid hay-feeding areas, Boyles said.

"Which feeding system is best varies with the operation," he said. "But if large amounts of hay are being wasted, some sort of controlling access might have to be considered."

For more information about hay feeding systems and wastage, interested people can contact their county office of Ohio State University Extension or Boyles directly at (614) 292-7669. Extension publications on the topic that could be helpful include Fact Sheet AEX-304-97: Using Geotextile Fabric in Livestock Operations and the section on hay feeding in Bulletin 872: Maximizing Fall and Winter Grazing of Beef Cows and Stocker Cattle. These publications are available on the Ohio State University College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences' website (http://ohioline.ag.ohio-state.edu).

Using MUN To Monitor Dairy Nutrition

Fernando Bargo
Penn State

Well-managed pastures are high in total and rumen degradable protein. Total protein is often above 20 percent and sometimes over 30 percent in the spring and fall. Rumen degradable protein can be greater than 75 percent of the total protein.

Excess dietary protein that is not utilized efficiently in the rumen must be converted to urea for excretion. This process requires energy and diverts energy from the production of milk. The nitrogen excreted in the urine becomes a concern from the environmental standpoint. In addition, excess or poorly utilized dietary protein is not good for rumen health and may decrease reproductive performance.

Most dairy producers feed supplemental grains with pasture; the rumen fermentable carbohydrate in the grain

Using MUN

"dilutes" the high protein in pasture. This helps utilize the rumen degradable protein which is then incorporated into rumen microbial protein. If cows are fed only pastures or relatively low levels of supplemental energy, it is expected that the urea formed from the excess dietary nitrogen would elevate milk urea nitrogen (MUN) levels.

Milk Urea Nitrogen (MUN)

Measurement of MUN has been available for a few years from Pa. DHIA and serves as a tool to monitor the nutrition program, or the dietary protein and carbohydrate balance. The nutritional basis for using MUN testing as a monitoring tool is that excess dietary protein in relation to ruminal available carbohydrates will result in elevated MUN. Low dietary protein in relation to high rumen available carbohydrates will result in low MUN. "Normal" levels of MUN are considered to range from 10 to 16 mg/100 ml of milk.

High quality pasture with high protein would be expected to increase MUN. There is limited information available to show this to be the case with grazing dairy cows. In a current research study at Penn State, we have found that cows receiving only pasture in the spring (no supplement) had MUNs of 16 mg/100ml. In contrast, grazing cows fed supplemental grains had MUNs of 10.5 mg/100 ml. There is clearly a difference which suggests some inefficiency in protein utilization with only pasture.

Field Study

A two-year field study in New York with 31 dairy farms found that the majority of the grazing herds had MUN levels were within the 10 to 16 mg/ml range that is considered "normal." We conducted a field study two years ago where milk samples monitored every two weeks during the spring averaged 14 to 15 mg/100 ml for three grazing herds.

The relatively "normal" MUN levels for pastured herds imply that nitrogen utilization in grazing herds is "normal." Most of the producers in our study and the New York study were balancing the rations and using feeding strategies to utilize available protein from pasture.
